"Blessed" Mesopotamia
"Greens, Always Greens"
Sorrow of a Crown
The Electric Chair
—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920.

The railroad from Basra to Bagdad, called "Mesopotamia's Artery," has been cut in three places. And London, having recently added Mesopotamia to the "Empire," is worried. The time table of that railroad has names that carry you back a hundred centuries into history, and many hundreds of centuries before written history began.

Running from Basra on the Persian Gulf, the stops include Babylon and Bagdad. The railroad serves the "valleys of the Tigris and the Euphrates."

If we could know the history of those two rivers, of human life as it grew up on the sure crops from the fertile soil that the rivers washed down, we should know the history of the world, since history is repetition.

After the steam locomotive was invented men continued racing horses for the purpose, they said, of developing speed and stamina for stage coach work. Crowds went in the steam cars to see the horses race.

Now, at the coming international yacht race, spectators will look down from above in flying ships.

Sports stand still, but other things progress.

An independent citizen, who thinks he ought to be elected President, tells Frank Munsey that all the world's troubles would disappear if the people would eat only "greens."

"Greens, greens, always greens," is the motto of this latest successor to Danton. He is Mr. Prindle from California, wears sandals and purple linen, and there is something in what he says about "greens."

A diet of "always greens" would make the people easy to handle. In India three hundrd million mild Asiatics, eating only vegetables, are easily ruled by a few million of beef-eating Englishmen thousands of miles away.

Sheep eat "always greens." It makes them peaceful and it suits the wolves.

The Empress Eugenie, dead at the age of ninety-four, her many sorrows, pathetically described, are ended forever. She lost a throne. Her boy, the PRINCE IMPERIAL, was killed when he went fighting with the British against the Zulus. That was sorrow, but because she pushed France into the war with Germany hundreds of thousands of French mothers were forced to lose sons, perhaps better than the PRINCE IMPERIAL.

Life and the nature of women are strange. Leaving out the death of her son, it is probable the greatest sorrow in Eugenie's life was the fact that other Queens and Empresses in Europe would have nothing to do with her after Napoleon III. made her Empress. Boycotted by royalty, she never "arrived" socially. Millions of women in this country can testify that that is REAL SORROW.

New Zealand governs herself, keeps out Asiatics, owns her railroads, lets public contracts to OLD workingmen in groups, that they may earn all they can; transports labor to the farms free of charge, allowing it to pay its way back; regulates foreign ownership of land without making an exception in favor of Britishers. Now, New Zealand builds houses for workingmen with public money, sells the houses at cost, allowing workers to pay for them in instalments.

Down there they call that a common sense solution of the housing problem. Here we should call it Socialism or Bolshevism.

It seems to us, enlightened descendants of Franklin, Jefferson and the others, that there is something criminal in the suggestion that a workingman's family should live in a house out of which no profiteer has made a dollar.

An artist wanted to make a picture of the electric chair in Sing Sing. Major Lawes, warden, wouldn't let him. The warden says the electric chair has nothing to do with art.

Nevertheless, art might well have something to do with the electric chair. When you see at Cologne Rubens' picture of St. Peter crucified, head downward, and when you see other pictures of tortures inflicted on courageous martyrs, you feel despise cruelty. Anything that makes people hate cruelty is useful.

A picture of the electric chair, as a really great artist might present it, in all its brutal horror, might well be hung up in every art gallery. It would make men hate the ignorance that makes a common executioner of science and seeks to bring government down to the level of the murderer, killing as he kills.

A human being strapped in the electric chair, and a second later straining hideously, turning pale, while reporters watch his soul being shot into hell or heaven, isn't a pleasant sight. The public should be compelled to see it in order to know what government does in the public's name.

RESOLUTE GOES INTO DRY DOCK

American Cup Defender to Have Coating of Oil Removed From Hull

By International News Service.

Sandy Hook, N. J., July 13.—The American cup defender, Resolute, was taken to dry dock early today to have her undersides polished once again before the first of the international races is sailed on Thursday.

A coating of oil, which gathered on her hull despite precautions taken by her skipper in having her enveloped in a canvas covering, was the cause for her sudden removal from Sandy Hook. The defender may remain in dry dock until late Wednesday night or early Thursday morning. She may be towed back here for another spin over the cup course.

The Shamrock IV., with the 23-metre boat, rolled lazily at her mooring in the Horseshoe Cove today, ready for a spin off the "Hook." Sunny weather prevailed, and there was a light breeze outside.

As the date for the first of the cup races draws near, the waters around Sandy Hook are attracting craft of

FORGERIES DENIED BY WOMAN

Helen Bottomly Held in $3,000 by Court; Accused of Passing Bad Checks

Posing as a relative of a well known Boston surgeon and riding in an expensive limousine, Miss Helen Bottomly, alias William Williamson and Colony, is alleged to have told the police that she passed bad checks in this city.

Despite the so-called confession, she pleaded not guilty in Municipal Court and was held in $3,000 for a hearing next Tuesday.

Smartly gowned and as immaculate as though stepping from her three-room suite in a Back Bay hotel, the woman was taken from the Tombs and interrogated by Captain Alonzo Armstrong before appearing in court.

She was later arraigned, charged with forging and uttering, on complaint of Inspectors Haggerty and McCarthy, who arrested her.

The career, as far as the police have learned it, of the thirty-three-years-old woman, was filed with high lights and thrilling incidents in the cities of the East, where she scattered her worthless checks.

Beautiful, refined and dressed in the best of taste, expensively and yet quietly, the woman made a distinct impression in court. She wore a blue voile flowered gown, with gray slippers, gray silk stockings

First Full Facts of Barney's Vacation

How Barney hid in Medford, where he gave a piano recital to a group of young women, and how he attended a conference of the gang of auto thieves on a Cambridge playground are described in today's installment of the exclusive Boston American story of the escape from Charlestown State Prison of Herman L. Barney.

It was June 2 when Barney returned to Greater Boston after his first unsuccessful attempt to leave this part of the country.

His return threw another scare into the hearts of the gang men and the ringleaders, known to the less important members as "the board of directors."

It was decided that he must be gotten out of the Commonwealth without delay. It had become of no moment to them where he went as long as he got away. In brief they were tired of having him on their hands.

This time, however, it was decided to so carefully lay the plans that there would be no possibility of failure and as the narrative is continued how extensive these preparations were will become apparent.

Barney remained in the house in Medford until the evening of June 5 when "a rumble" caused the gang to again send him to Lexington.

As soon as he arrived in Medford, Barney changed his clothes, replacing the major's uniform with a suit of "civvies" of the latest cut.

"Some Jane might drop in," he re-

WILL NOT BE FORCED TO BATHE

Officials Rule, However, That "Strikers" May Not Leave Ship

According to the plan announced today by representatives of the Boston Health Department and the United States Public Health Service, the 250 members of the crew of the White Star liner Cretic, who refused to submit to fumigating baths at Gallop's Island, have won a victory.

The sailormen are not going to be bathed. Their triumph over American health regulation will have cost the White Star line—what with the delay of one week, and one thing and another—at least $100,000.

After being held at quarantine several days owing to the attitude taken by her crew, the Cretic moved up at 10 a. m today to Commonwealth Pier.

The crew, it was announced, would immediately be taken from the ship and detained in the Inspection quarters of the Immigration Department while the Cretic itself was being subjected to a fumigating process.

When the ship has been fumigated the sailors will return, the United

Message to Zionists From Lloyd George

By International News Service.

London, July 13.—A message of greeting and congratulation from Premier Lloyd George was read today to the International Zionist Conference. It follows:

"I send heartiest congratulations to the first world conference of the Zionists since the war on the restoration by the Jewish people of their national home. FORTY-EIGHTERS AND LABOR TRY TO REACH AGREEMENT

LIBERAL PLANKS OFFERED FOR THIRD PARTY PLATFORM

while with the Committee of Forty-Eight and other organizations for a third party, or whether the Labor party decides to fight its way through the coming campaign single-handed.

"We cannot surrender the principles for which we have stood," declared Chairman John H. Walker of the Labor convention today. "We must adopt a platform embodying these principles which will insure freedom to the people."

The sentiment of the convention has been very decidedly in favor of no concessions from the Labor party in the matter of platform. Several of the delegates already have announced their intention to carry on a fight on the floor of the convention if the platform presented does not meet all of the planks of the most liberal. While awaiting the final outcome of the negotiations for amalgamation, the platform committee of the Labor party has been working on a rough draft of a proposed platform. Among the essential planks which have been tentatively agreed upon are these:

LABOR PARTY PLANKS.

Public ownership and democratic control of the railroads and all public utilities.

Public ownership and democratic control of the banks.

Declaration of the right of labor to strike without interference from any source whatever.

Investigation of the co-operative system and other proposed means for the reduction of the cost of living and advancement of all methods of increasing the workers of the products of his toil at the lowest cost.

Complete restoration of all rights of free speech, free press and free assemblage. The adoption of a plank declaring for amnesty for political prisoners is being strongly urged.

While the leaders of the half dozen political elements now meeting here were earnestly advocating fusion with a common platform and presidential candidate, the actual amalgamation hung fire.

ISSUES IN CONTROVERSY.

The differences between the Forty-Eighters, led by such men as Amos Pinchot, George L. Record and J. A. H. Hopkins of the old Progressive wing, and the Labor people dominated by John Fitzpatrick, Max Hayes and Tucson Bannett, form the chief obstacle in the merger. The other and smaller fry, including the Non-Partisan Leaguers, the Single Taxers and others, are generally in accord.

The two principal obstacles to the merger are in the matter of a name and a platform. The labor people want the name "Labor" included in the party cognomen. They would like to see the name "Farmer" in it. "Farmer-labor" or "Labor-farmer" have been suggested.

Some of the Forty-Eighters, among whom is Allan McCurdy of New York, contend that the name particular is "class organization" and a class party. They want some name indicative of "principle." Particular "Liberals" "Peoples," "Progressive" and other names have been suggested by them.

Separate conventions, the labor convention in Carmenia Hall and the Forty-Eighters in the Morrison Hotel, were again the order of the day.

The sentiment prevailing with the Forty-eighters were the American Constitutional party, the Non-Partisan League, the World War Veterans, the Rank and File Veterans Association, the American Party of Texas, the Single Tax organization, the Los Angeles Plum Plan League and the Private Sailors and Soldiers Legion.

WRANGLE FOR HOURS.

After wrangling for two hours, the committee of forty-eighters withdrew to hold a caucus alone. This caucus became a prolonged affair and the labor committee meeting in another room finally drafted a counter proposal. It was then proposed that the joint committees recommend to both conventions the holding of a joint convention in Carmen's Hall, where the labor convention is now sitting.

The labor group proposed also the appointment of a number of small joint sub-committees to agree on the platform, a party name and other convention and party problems.

The conference committee of the Committee of Forty-eight, in turn, made a counter-proposal to the labor group that they abide by the resolutions adopted Sunday night, favoring amalgamation, and calling for the appointment of two sub-committees of five to consider a union and platform with the Forty-eighters' sub-committees of the same number.

Both conference committees stood their ground, however, and the labor committee went back to Carmen's Hall without meeting the Forty-eighters again. At the night session of the labor convention the recommendation that the small sub-committees be named was made to the delegates and rejected. The original conference committee of twenty-two members was directed to resume negotiations.

Senator Lodge said he expected to make several campaign speeches for the Harding-Coolidge Republican ticket.

HEARST IS NOT A CANDIDATE

Orders Prevention of His Nomination; Is Not Committed Yet to Any Party

San Francisco, July 13, 1920.
To Editor, Chicago American, Chicago, Ill.

Please do not allow any organization to present my name at Chicago as candidate for any office if you can possibly prevent it. Am not a candidate in any sense and I think that any suggestion of being a candidate weakens my influence in the only way that I wish to exert it, namely, in behalf of the best men on any ticket regardless of party.

Please do not put any obstacles whatever in the way of the nomination of Senator La Follette by the combined elements which constitute the third party. Senator La Follette is a great American, worthy of any honor that may be tendered him.

The question before the third party, as I understand it, seems to be how best to promote effective American opposition to foreign entangling alliances. If the nomination of Senator La Follette appears in the wisdom of the third party leaders gathered in Chicago to be the best way to accomplish this, their careful judgment and deep sincerity deserve all consideration in the columns of our newspapers.

I am not committed to any party or any candidates, nor do I want our papers to be so committed until after all nominations have been made and we have had an opportunity carefully to review the whole political situation and to decide what is the best course to pursue in the interests of our clientele, in the interests of the public generally and in support of the principles for which we stand.

(Signed)
WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

POLES ROUTED FROM MINSK

New Military Genius, 27 Years Old, Reported Leading Great Russian Drive

London, July 13.—The Russians have reoccupied the important city of Minsk on the northern end of the Russo-Polish battlefront, according to a Soviet wireless message received from Moscow today. Minsk is about 253 miles northeast of Warsaw.

The Russian General Brusiloff is not commanding the Russian armies, but that a new military genius has arisen in the ranks of the Bolsheviki. The new commander is described as "Comrade Tuchatchevski, aged twenty-seven, who led the first army which defeated the forces of General Denikin and Admiral Kolchak."

The Russian communique claimed also the capture of the two strategic cities of Molodetchno and Svenziany, both of which were the scenes of violent battles between the Austro-Germans and the Russians in the World War.

It was reported that the Poles had lost the fortress of Brest-Litovsk, where the Russian Bolshevikl and the Germans signed their peace treaty, but this was denied at the Polish Legation. Brest-Litovsk is only 20 miles from Warsaw, the Polish capital.

The advance of the Russians south of Minsk probably will compel the immediate evacuation of that fortress city by the Poles.

Latest advices from the eastern war theatre puts the Polish line through Svenziany, Vilelka, Minsk west of Bobruisk (where the Russians forced their latest crossing of the Beresina River), through Ovrutsh, west of Sarny, through the fortress of Rovno, through Dubno and Pavolkirov, thence to the Rumanian frontier.

Allies at Spa Try to Arrange Russian-Polish Peace

Paris, July 13.—The allied statesmen at Spa are attempting to arrange a peace conference between Poland and Russia, according to the Petit Parisien today.

The Spa correspondent of the Paris newspaper has learned that the following are the chief terms for peace in eastern Europe:

1—Poland shall renounce any imperialistic policy and withdraw her armies to the Brest Litovsk boundary line.

2—If the Russian armies advances nearer than thirty miles to this line the allies will give "whole-hearted support to the Poles."

3—Envoys of Russia, Poland, Finland, Lithuania and Esthonia shall meet in London.

(According to advices from Moscow and Warsaw, the Polish troops are already on the Brest Litovsk boundaline at its southern end and are swiftly approaching its northern end. The Russians are in contact with the poles over the whole front.

and a flowered blue hat, and carried costly Summer furs.

According to the police, they are convinced that the woman is a native of Haverhill, although she refused to make any admissions to that effect. She told Captain Armstrong that her last address in New York was No. 294 West 86th street, which place she left three weeks ago.

The woman said that at this time she hired a limousine with liveried chauffeur and began a tour of various cities, eventually reaching Boston.

While refusing to give any definite information in regard to any other city than Boston, the police believe that she stayed in Hartford, New Haven, Springfield and Worcester, and have sent descriptions to those cities.

The police say that the woman cashed checks totalling $4,000.

One of these checks was in payment for minor repairs on the automobile, which is now in the care of the chauffeur, who was not held.

Germans at Spa Flee From Angry Crowd

By International News Service.

Spa, Belgium, July 13.—An attack upon members of the German delegation attending the Spa conference was averted today when the Teutons carried out a strategic retreat and sped away in motor cars. The trouble began when a Belgian officer whose treatment in a German prison camp during the war still rankled got into an argument with a German attached to the Teuton delegation.

The Belgian struck the German with his fist. A score of Germans who had come into Spa from the Germans' headquarters on the outskirts of Spa interfered. A crowd gathered and was menacing the Germans when the latter fled down a side street to their motor cars and disappeared.

Herr Brockblosser, correspondent of the official Wolf Agency of Germany, was injured in the head. The Germans who fled included Dr. Dernburg, one of the best known publicists in Germany, and Herr von Eckhardt, a prominent Hamburg editor.

Ex-President Taft to Be Chief 'Uncle Jim'

"Big Brother" must give way to "Uncle Jim" as a counsellor for youth, according to the plan announced by the Unitarian church and announced at Unity House here today. "Uncle Jim" will be judged according to his breadth of vision and ability to teach boys what they want to know. Former President Taft, although his prefix name is William Howard, will be the chief "Uncle Jim." Seven thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine others are to be recruited in the United States. Their duties will include: Elimination of the word "must" from a boy's vocabulary and teaching him to value a clean, strong body, play a fair game, handle tools or a boat, swim, Judge human beings, appreciate good books and music, prefer the real to imitation, and to be courteous, considerate and kindly.

CRETIC SAILORS WIN 'MUTINY'

Need Not Bathe, Say Health Officials, But Must Stay on Ship

States will post a guard at the gangplank and none will be allowed to leave the ship again while she remains in port. The Cretic probably will get away again on Saturday, leaving for New York to sail again for the Mediterranean.

IMMIGRANTS ARE LANDED.

The liner brought to Commonwealth Pier today the baggage of scores of immigrants who came over in her steerage and pending the receipt of their belongings have been boarding at the pier. As soon as bags and trunks could be identified and distributed men, women and children began leaving for destinations in all parts of the country.

It was admitted that the arrangement made today by Agent S. J. Jackson of the White Star line and representatives of the local Health Board and the U. S. Public Health Service had by no means removed the possibility of further trouble of the same sort when the next ship comes in from Italy.

Because most of the immigration now coming to the United States from Asiatic ports comes by way of Italy the United States Public Health Service demands that every immigrant submit to a physical examination before passing passage.

"We will not submit to such a rule," says the Italian Public Service. "Such requirement is made at Liverpool or other British ports; why should it be made at Italian ports?"

REJECT "FUMIGATION BATH."

United States surgeons, therefore, were not permitted to make the required examination "of the Cretic's passengers at Naples.

As a direct result the American consul at Naples was unable to send the Cretic away with a clean bill of health. Arriving here without such a document ship and passengers automatically became subject to quarantine regulations.

Among these regulations is that which calls for a bath. It is called a "fumigating bath." It corresponds, as to details, however, to the process which American soldiers went through before leaving American ports for their homes.

Most of the 250 sailors of the Cretic are of Italian birth. About 150 of them, it is said, made no complaint. The other 100 took the ground that because saloon passengers were not asked to take the baths there was no reason why the "proletariat" should be subjected to them.

Volunteer Inspectors Will Investigate Prices for State Commission investigate the prices and will report directly to the commission.

Where there is prima facie evidence of conscientiousless prices, the dealers will be summoned before the commission for public hearings. Transcripts of the evidence will be made public for the information of the purchasers.

If all this fails in break down the prices, General Sherburne declared that the blacklist of unfair dealers would be announced. Lacking adequate laws to punish profiteering, this methods of "pitiless publicity" will be invoked to bring the dealers to their senses, he said.

General Sherburne today sent the following letter, announcing the plans of the committee, to the mayors of cities and the chairmen of Boards of Selectmen throughout the State:

SHERBURNE'S LETTER.

"From reports received at this office it would appear that many of the retail stores, especially those dealing in meats and produce, are charging prices far beyond what is reasonable and fair. There is no law in this State on the subject; remonstrance with and admonition of the individual dealers by this commission seem to have lost their effect; and it is therefore necessary to ascertain and warn the purchasing public against these unfair dealers in order that they may protect themselves. The small appropriation available for our work makes it impossible to cover the whole State adequately. Our inspectors are constantly busy, but can accomplish relatively little.

"We are therefore writing to ask you to recommend to us one or more inspectors in each locality, either municipal employes or volunteers, whom we can swear in and instruct in the performance of their duties and who will report directly to us. We will then summons dealers before us for hearing and submit to you transcripts of the evidence so that the people may be made thoroughly aware of the facts. If the fair price committee is still in existence, I would suggest that you ask its co-operation.

"We request your early action in this matter."

Prices of Fish Now Lower Than in 1914

Prices of one food commodity—fish—are lower in Boston today than an the same day in 1914, an investigation of the local market shows.

Although receipts of fish are far below what they were a year ago, prices are one-half what they were in 1919. Dealers are at a loss to explain the situation except that people have almost wholly stopped eating fish, advocated by dietitians as an ideal hot weather food.

The only noticeable demand, they said, was for such so-called Summer fish as mackerel, swordfish, salmon and halibut. But the prices of even these are remarkably low. For the ground fish, such as haddock, pollock and hake, there is almost no demand. Three-fourths of the shipping fleets of Boston, Gloucester, Provincetown and Rockland, Me., are tied up at the piers. Some vessels are being dismantled. Many shipping schooners have been sold for coastal trade or inter-island shipping in the West Indies.

Not in a score of years has fish production reached such a low ebb, but in spite of that prices continue low. Haddock has not sold at the boats here above 4 cents a pound in several weeks and frequently 2 cents was the prevailing figure. The fishermen receive 1 cent of that and in addition $40 a month wages.

Vessel owners say it is impossible for them to operate except at a less under these conditions.

Codfish was selling at two cents a pound and steak cod at four cents today. In the retail markets ground fish were selling for five cents at the cut price stores and the finest fresh shore haddock and cod were bringing only eight cents.

For a while in June, mackeral was scarce and the price was high, but it has dropped several cents this month. It is selling at retail at 15 to 18 cents a pound. Swordfish, although the season is early, sold at retail today for 25 and 30 cents a pound. One year ago its price was 40 and 50 cents.

The only sea food for which there is a demand are the shell fish and oysters, in which there has been no lowering of price levels.

MINDKEEN IS COURT VERDICT

Judge Rules Old Tammany Boss Can Give to Wife as He Pleases

Jacksonville, Fla., July 13.—Richard Croker, former boss of Tammany Hall, is sane and competent to manage his own affairs in Florida.

This is the effect of a decision by Circuit Judge E. B. Donnell, dissolving the temporary injunction obtained by his second son's children, Howard and Richard Croker, Jr., and Mrs. Ethel White, to prevent him disposing of his property.

The temporary injunction was obtained on March 20 last, pending proceedings brought by the sons and daughters for the appointment of a committee to take charge of their father's estate.

Similar litigation, it is understood, has been started in the New York courts. Mr. Croker was preparing to return to Ireland with his wife, Bula, when the suit halted their trip.

Mrs. Croker was the centre of the attack in the old political and personalities. Affidavits filed by his children charged that his memory was feeble and impaired and that Mrs. Croker, by cunning and deceit, fraudulently succeeded in obtaining control of his large estate.

ASSERTED HE WOULD LOSE ALL.

The application for the permanent injunction asserted that Mr. Croker was wholly incompetent and that unless the court acted he would be stripped of all his possessions by his wife.

Mr. Croker answered with a petition to dismiss the injunction on the ground that he was wholly competent and did not desire or authorize the suit.

In interviews and at the trial the aged defendant displayed flashes of his old-time blunt humor. Then he charged that his children had beggared him by their extravagance and selfishness and that it was his wife who had rehabilitated his fortunes in his declining years. He attributed his financial ills to small, sustaining his statements under raking cross-examination.

He denied that his wife, the former Cherokee belle, never sought to alienate him from his children. Instead, he insisted, they had tried to alienate him from her for their mercenary advantage.

NO DELUSIONS FOUND.

In his opinion Judge Donnell said:

"A great deal was said in the testimony of the alleged mental derangement of counsel about delusions of Richard Croker, Sr. He has had some misunderstandings with some of his children of late years, but in many of the instances he attorneys assured him that he had not dealt with fairly.

"He expressed a willingness to be shown that he is wrong. Such being the case, I do not believe that his attitude toward his children nor on any other subject constitutes delusions or hallucinations.

"There is a great deal of evidence favoring the charge of undue influence as well as the charge of mental weakness, and I think that the petitioners have failed to sustain either charge. No sufficient proof of fraud was offered.

As to many gifts Mr. Croker has made to his wife, the court ruled that he is the sole judge of the disposition of his property.

WARTIME COAL RULE LIKELY

Operators Seek Quick Supply for Industries to Prevent Restrictions

Washington, July 13.—Operators of practically all the large bituminous coal fields were in conference here to devise means of preventing a possible industrial shutdown from lack of coal.

So serious has the fuel shortage become that discussion was heard of a possible return to a fuel administrator who could administer the drastic war-time regulations which were in force during the winters of 1917 and 1918.

President Wilson, under the terms of the Lever Act, still retains the power to recreate such a government agency for the efficient distribution of coal.

In an effort to avoid such a contingency by increasing the supply and distribution of coal, the bituminous operators conducted a series of closed conferences, which were continued today.

The important development of the meeting was the appointment of a sub-committee of operators to deal immediately with the serious shortages existing in the Great Lakes and New England districts. Industries in both these districts, according to reports received here, are working on a reserve which may fail at any time.

The iron ore supplies of the lake districts may be seriously affected unless a supply of coal are received there immediately.

Cushing Appeals for Children's Aid

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, President Grafton D. Cushing says, must receive more funds through contributions and bequests or seriously curtail its work.

"We are the only agency of our kind working among 1,119,800 Massachusetts children," Mr. Cushing writes to the Editor of the Boston American. "We have never refused any child in distress and neglected children anywhere in Massachusetts, firmly believing that if we do good work we can count on generous friends of children to furnish the money, but we must change our policy and radically curtail the work unless we can steadily increase our contributions and continue to receive large sums as bequests.

"We shall continue to do our utmost for the children who are victims of cruelty and of degeneracy, confident that when our need is known a generous public will come to their aid."

The treasurer of the M. S. P. C. C. is John H. Sturgis. Contributions should be sent to Mr. Sturgis at No. 43 Mt. Vernon street, Boston.

WOMAN SLAIN BY CHAUFFEUR

Rich Broker's Wife Shot by Driver, Who Also Kills Self; Hint at Love in Tragedy

Stonington, Ct., July 13.—Bernard Gelasier, chauffeur, shot and killed his employer, Mrs. Arthur DeCordova, New York beauty and wife of wealthy stock broker, in a wooded section of the lonely Stonington post road. He then turned the revolver upon himself, inflicting a wound in the head, from which he died in the Lawrence General Hospital in New London.

Geisler never gained consciousness and New London County authorities are at a loss for a motive unless his act followed an attempt to make love to his mistress and her spurning of his advances.

An early theory that the double tragedy was the work of a third party or the result of a suicide pact between the wealthy young matron and her servant was discarded by Prosecutor Hewitt and the fact of overwhelming evidence

Mrs. De Cordova and her chauffeur left the Hotel Griswold at Eastern Point yesterday with a bundle of laundry. They were last seen alive entering the wooded road in North Stonington shortly before dark.

Discovery of the double tragedy followed when James Main, a farmer, heard three revolver shots, fired in rapid succession, and investigated.

The De Cordova automobile was in the middle of the road and Mrs. De Cordova's body a few feet away. One bullet was in her heart, another in her right breast.

Geisler's body sagged across a wire fence at the side of the road. He was bleeding freely from a bullet wound in the right temple and was unconscious.

On the ground between the pair was an army revolver, with three chambers empty.

In the automobile were found, a party's empty bottle of whiskey, numerous cigarette stubs and matches.

LABOR TAKES UP IRISH DISPUTE

British Trades Union Congress May Also Discuss Polish-Russian War

By International News Service.

London, July 13.—A special trades union congress representing practically all of the organized workers of the United Kingdom assembled here today to discuss labor's attitude towards the strike of Irish railwaymen.

It was reported that the conference would extend its original program and discuss the allied attitude towards the Russo-Polish war also.

The Irish railway employes went on strike rather than handle munitions consigned to British troops. The government failed to reach an agreement with the Irish strikers, who appealed to the organized workers of England to support them.

Leaders of the extremist faction of the coal miners expressed themselves in favor of direct and emphatic action. They proposed a resolution calling for a general strike unless the British government withdraws all its troops from Ireland and ceases the production of munitions destined for Ireland and for the armed forces that are waging war against Russia.

It was pointed out that if the resolution were adopted by the congress it would be necessary for the various unions to be balled upon it before any decisive action could be taken towards putting it into effect.

Leaders of the movement predicted that any such resolution would be voted down. They declared that the 4,000,000 organized workers undoubtedly would veto a general strike which was designed for political ends.

It am hopeful that no crisis will arise," declared J. H. Thomas, head of the Railwaymen's Union, before the meeting opened.

The postal workers proposed "direct action" unless a plebiscite was taken on the Irish issue, but it was defeated. Delegates representing 4,756,000 trade unionists opposed it; delegates representing 1,916,000 trade unionists supported it.

BANDIT BLOWS OUT BRAINS

Shoots Dorchester Man in Cheek; Fires at Woman and Worcester Policeman

Worcester, July 13.—Opening fire on the members of an automobile party he had engaged to drive him from Boston, a young man believed to be James Ryce of Rochester, N. Y., wounded one man, narrowly missed a woman, engaged in a pistol duel with a policeman and then blew out his own brains, here today.

The body of Ryce and his victim, Harry F. Joyce of No. 45 Topliff street, Dorchester, were taken to the City Hospital, where the latter's wounds were found to be severe but not serious.

The remainder of the automobile party were detained at police headquarters, where their names were given out as Abraham Smith, No. 69 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury, driver of the machine; Mrs. Mary Rivest, No. 10 Angier street, East Boston, and Walter Andrews, No. 6 Glover street, Boston.

SHOT TWICE IN CHEEK.

According to the police, the shooting took place on Main street, near Hammond street, after Ryce had produced a heavy pistol and ordered Smith to drive to Hartford. The shooting was said to have been precipitated when Joyce leaned suddenly toward the gunman, who fired twice, both bullets taking effect in the other's cheek.

The police say the bandit, who was [illegible]

about twenty-five years old, appeared at Smith's taxi stand in Scollay square, Boston, and asked the latter to drive him to Worcester. He said he would have told Smith the money was no object and that any price under $75 would be satisfactory.

Smith then asked his prospective customer if he objected to the presence of the driver's friends, who he wished to take with him in order that he might have company on the way back. Ryce offered no objection and entered the automobile.

PRODUCED REVOLVER.

Mrs. Rivest occupied a front seat with Andrews, the other one was taken in the rear. The machine proceeded without incident to Framingham, Lake Quinsigamond bridge, when Smith announced that he needed gasoline and asked Ryce for money with which to pay for it. The police say Ryce replied that he would, but instead of producing a bankroll, drew a large caliber revolver, the muzzle of which he jammed into Smith's back, ordering him to drive through Worcester to Hartford.

With the gun against his back, Smith had no alternative, it is said. Mrs. Rivest whispered a suggestion that he proceed to the police station, which he passed up Front street to Main street, past City Hall, and had nearly reached Hammond street, when Joyce bent over toward Ryce. The bandit's pistol was fired twice, and Joyce fell, wounded from behind in the face of Joyce.

At the sound of the explosions Smith threw out his clutch, and applying the brake brought the machine to a stop, the occupants, with the exception of Ryce, leaping to the ground.

In the meantime Patrolman John O'Malley of station 3 of the local police department, who was at that time across away, heard the sound of the shots.

Commandeering a passing automobile, the policeman hurried to the spot, and claims that as he neared there he saw Ryce fire at the woman, missing her.

He then turned on the patrolman, who came up on the run, drawing his own pistol.

The men exchanged several shots without effect, and Ryce then put a bullet through his head.

His identity was believed to have been established by letters found in a wallet.

Joyce, who is twenty-four years old, served in the navy during the war. He is a former resident of Boston, who was passing resuscitated the boy after half an hour.

CURLEY TELLS WOMEN HE WILL BE MAYOR AGAIN

Bottles in Seaplane Set Navy Guessing

New York, July 13.—The navy has another mystery.

It is not as serious nor as saddening as the mystery of the Cyclops.

But it is causing no little discussion in navy circles, just the same, and it developed a new turn today.

Briefly, it is: Who put 114 unlabeled brown bottles in the gun pit or seaplane No. 1464 on its now famous trip to Rimini, from Miami, Fla., and return, and what did those same bottles contain?

TWO PUT ON TRIAL.

Ensign Windsor B. Cushing and Ensign Frank Lamb are now being tried by a court martial at the New York Navy Yard, charged with violation of Secretary Daniels' order No. 99, issued shortly after he assumed charge of the Navy Department and forbidding the storing of intoxicants aboard any ship of the department.

Lieutenant Hugh Cuthrell, acting commander of the navy air station at Key West, was the chief witness for the prosecution, but he wasn't at all certain Order 99 had been violated. He said he saw the seaplane land on its return from the Bahama Island, and that when he looked it over for repairs he discovered the brown bottles. Says lately.

He could not even tell the court whether there was any liquid in the bottles, because he had left the craft long before the bottles put overboard immediately. They sank, he said.

NATIVE'S DID THE LOADING.

The witness gave the story of members of the crew that the bottles had been put on the seaplane at Miami, by natives employed there to work to pay any attention to the matter. He also told the finding and arrest of the officers of the craft were ashore. According to Lieutenant Cuthrell, the crew were astounded when they arrived at Miami and found the cargo of suspicious bottles aboard.

The case was continued today, when witnesses brought from the Pacific coast were called upon to testify. The court-martial board is presided over by Commander C. M. Fala, retired.

'HoneylessHoneymoon' Proves a Failure

Old-fashioned honeymoons, with Friend Husband along, are the best. The new-fangled, husbandless, "honeyless" kind is very unsatisfactory as a substitute.

Mrs. Grace Nicholas Fournier is an authority, for she has tried both kinds.

She was back with her brand new husband in their apartment-for-two on Huntington avenue today, after a two-week experiment in "solitary" honeymooning.

Mrs. Fournier, former stenographer at the Hotel Somerset, m[illegible]ried Lon W. Fournier in the [illegible]ess understanding that they sp[illegible]heir honeymoon apart.

She wanted time to get acquainted by correspondence with her husband, whom she had known but a short time.

And she thought she preferred picking hay on the farm of a girl friend to holding hands at Niagara or doing any of the other foolish but more or less enjoyable things Newlyweds get into the funny papers about.

After two weeks of it the husbandless bride was ready to admit that it was flat, stale and unprofitable. She advises brides to be as romantic and foolish as they like and to never, never go honeymooning without a husband.

VANDALS SLASH RAINCOATS

Entire Stock of North End Concern Destroyed; Owners Suspect Union Agents

With their stock and finished product in tatters, as the result of slashing, believed to have been the work of vandals, the Weatherproof Clothing Manufacturing Company, Inc., of Nos. 41-43 Merchants row, was compelled to close today and according to members of the firm will remain closed indefinitely.

Razors were apparently the weapons used. Rolls of cloth were ruined by deep, clean cuts and then scattered about the floor. Five hundred raincoats were destroyed and a button-hole-making machine valued at $325 was demolished.

Coupled with the destruction was an anonymous telephone call which [illegible] Bass, one of the firm, said he received today warning him not to complain to the police or he and his partners, Harry Nevenzung and Barnett Cohen would be killed.

The manufacturers said that they have been annoyed frequently of late because they did the work themselves with the exception of one woman employe. They employed, they were visited by the business agent of the Raincoat Makers' Union, they said, who suggested that they stop doing the actual manufacturing work themselves and hire union raincoat makers. He was told, the manufacturers said, that business conditions did not warrant such a step.

Five men were seen to enter the building occupied by the Weatherproof Company on Saturday afternoon. They broke two locks to enter the room where the cloth is stored, police kept. Police of Station No. 1 said they believed it was done by the same gang which has been operating in the [illegible]ohn in Hyde Park, Providence, Bourgeois and Boston. They predicted that early arrests would be made.

ARREST TWO CARMEN ON LYNN GIRL'S CHARGE

Charged with assaulting 16-year-old Helen Doyle by kissing and hugging her, William Reason and Leroy Dean, both car men, were arrested today in that city.

The incident occurred on the trolley car at 5 a. m. July 5. The men were arrested from a description given by the girl, who says they called her to their car and pulled her in. One began to hug and kiss her, she told the police, while the other did likewise. She says she jumped through an open window to escape.

JAMES O'NEILL, ACTOR, VERY ILL

Made Famous by 6,000 Appearances as Dantes in "Monte Cristo"

New London, Conn., July 13—James O'Neill, the world famed actor, and a resident of this city for the past forty years, is critically ill at the Lawrence Memorial Hospital, and grave fears as to his recovery are expressed. His wife and sons, James O'Neill, Jr., and Eugene, the latter well known as a playwriter, are at his bedside.

O'Neill has been ill a year, and a few weeks ago his malady developed very seriously. He was brought here from New York, where he had undergone an operation for the removal of stomach ulcers. He is seventy-three years of age and the greater part of his life has been spent on the stage.

For more than 15 years and in more than 6,000 performances, he played the part of Edmund Dantes in "The Count of Monte Cristo," and it was in this play that he achieved his greatest success. Following this he played as D'Artagan in Grundy's versions of Dumas' "Three Musketeers."

O'Neill came to the country from Kilkenny, Ireland, where he was born in November, 1847. His first stage appearance was at the National Theatre at Cincinnati in 1866. In "Fire Bob Miles' company in 1869, and following a successful season with this company went as leading man with the Ford company, with whom he also starred for several seasons.

He next played with the John Wilstein Company in Cleveland, the McVicker's Stock Company in Chicago, and in 1872 played at Hooley's Theatre in Chicago, toured California in 1874 and 1875 with Union Square Company in New York in 1875, and in San Francisco in 1877, where he played until 1850. It was in San Francisco that he made his appearance as the Count of Monte Cristo.

Next he played in "A Celebrated Case," and other plays in which he starred, including "Two Orphans," "Pizarro," and as the prince in "The Danicheffs."

Three times he attempted to retire from the stage, but he was often recalled. His last appearance was in "The Wanderer," in which he appeared in New York, Boston, Chicago and other theatrical cities in 1914-15. Eugene O'Neill is the author of "Beyond the Horizon," which was recently declared to be the best play written during 1919, and for which Mr. O'Neill received the $1,000 Pulitzer prize.

TODAY IS HOTTER BUT DRYER

Old General Humidity in Retreat, Leaves High Temperature More Bearable

Notwithstanding the common testimony of men, women, children and other inhabitants that today is ever so much cooler than yesterday or the day before, the thermometer at 9 o'clock this morning unblushingly proclaimed 76 degrees, a record for the week at that hour. Yesterday's 9 o'clock figure was 74.

We asked the young man who brings up the Weather how about this?

"He's away," replied the young man, who comes from Auburndale and is an inveterate joker. (Goes in for charades and that sort of thing.)

"Who's away?" he was asked.

"Why, old General Humidity," replies the young man.

And such appears to be the case. The Weather Bureau's 9 o'clock bulletin reported humidity at 61 per cent., as compared with 84 per cent. at the same hour yesterday.

Today's temperatures:

1 a. m.	72
2 a. m.	71

5 a. m.	70
6 a. m.	69

BAY STATE INDUSTRIES ARE SLOWING DOWN

Industries throughout Massachusetts are slowing down. Returns at the State House indicate that July payrolls in many lines will total only half those of June.

Shoeworkers in Haverhill, Brockton and Lynn, the textile mills of Lowell and Spencer will receive 50 per cent. less this month than they earned in June. Marlboro shoe factories are running on from 60 to 70 per cent. capacity. Fall River mills 55 per cent. Leominster celluloid factories 60 per cent. and 14,000 mill hands of Lawrence will receive no wages this month.

A hopeful sign was the resumption of work at the Uswoco mills and Walworth Brothers' worsted mill, both of Lawrence, employing a total of 1,500 persons.

The Peabody tanneries are working on full time this season with the company went as leading man with the Ford company, with whom he also starred for several seasons.

Next he played in "A Celebrated Case," and other plays in which he starred, including "Two Orphans," "Pizarro," and as the prince in "The Danicheffs."

Three times he attempted to retire from the stage, but he was often recalled. His last appearance was in "The Wanderer," in which he appeared in New York, Boston, Chicago and other theatrical cities in 1914-15. Eugene O'Neill is the author of "Beyond the Horizon," which was recently declared to be the best play written during 1919, and for which Mr. O'Neill received the $1,000 Pulitzer prize.

STREET PAVING QUICKLY CRUMBLES IN ALLSTON

The asphalt surfacing placed on Warren and Spencer avenues two months ago is crumbling so badly that motorists wonder if the road is composed of. Many surfacings placed in Boston streets have broken up in from six months to a year, but for it to crumble in two months is considered a new record. On one spot near Allston square the asphalt has broken in small hits for a space more than one yard square.

CONVICT FLED TO LEXINGTON

Slept in Woods of the Town Before Starting Second Flight from State

A few minutes later the door bell rang and several young women called. They were calling on the girl in the house and were introduced to Barney, who, of course, used an assumed name.

ATTENDS CONFERENCE.

The dashing youth in the well-made and finely fitting clothes made an instantaneous hit with the young women, and before long Barney was the centre of an admiring circle of femininity.

There was a piano in the house and someone suggested dancing. Barney does not dance but he can play. He played the clarinet in the prison band at Charlestown and is an accomplished piano player. He offered his services to play for the dancing.

It was not long, however, before the young women ceased dancing, and grouped about him at the piano, admiring his ability in playing such difficult compositions as Rachmaninoff's "Prelude" and Chopin's "Valse."

For two full hours the fugitive entertained the young women with a piano recital.

When they complimented him on his playing, he remarked:

"Oh, you should hear me play the clarinet—it's too bad I left it at college."

When asked what college he attended, he replied, "Massachusetts." The young women understood him to mean the Massachusetts Agricultural College, and piled him with questions about the science of agriculture.

The following night, June 3, the leaders of the gang called a conference on a Cambridge playground and Barney was notified to attend the discussion of what was to become of him.

SELECT RENDEZVOUS.

In the evening, without any disguise, he walked some distance from the Medford house, where he was met by an automobile, and was conveyed him to within a block of the designated playground. He alighted and walked to the playground, a member of the gang at his side.

From the time he first entered the home of his friends in Cambridge until he was out of the Commonwealth the gang saw that Barney was never alone. At least one member of the gang accompanied him.

Arriving at the Cambridge playground, he found twelve members of the gang already assembled. They were engaged in scanning newspapers and from time to time one of them would read a paragraph. They were looking for "rambles" on the various roads on which Barney might be sent out of the State to safety.

Finally the conference began. Paying comparatively little attention to Barney and more at all to his wishes, the twelve gangmen discussed the advisability of taking various routes. They had already decided on the place to which he was to be "delivered," as they termed it. They had already made arrangements along the various routes that in case of accident Barney should be provided with new machines and such supplies as might be needed.

TAKES TO WOODS.

At the very time the conference was being held the fugitive's clothing was on the way to the out-of-the-State rendezvous.

Outside of Barney himself every one of the twelve present took an active part in the discussion, chiefly on the choice of roads. The discussion was settled by majority rule.

Before the gathering broke up Barney was notified to "take to the woods" in Lexington, as there had been a rumble, and to prepare himself for the second flight the next night, June 5.

Barney returned to the Medford house in the same manner and by the same route as he had gone to the open-air conference, which, incidentally, was held directly beneath a large arc light.

The following night, in obedience to the orders of the gang, and accompanied by a member of it, he made his way through back streets and quiet roads to Lexington.

He and his companion, well provided with food, revolvers, cigarettes and in fact, everything but a roof, spent the night in the forest. As he wakened in the morning, Barney made the remark that he would like to camp out the rest of his life.

On the evening of June 5, Barney's companion led him to the rendezvous, whence he was to start on his second flight out of the Commonwealth. There found all the gangmen, who had participated in the open air conference two nights before, on hand, as well as two or three new faces.

BEGINS FLIGHT.

One of these latter was introduced to Barney as the man who would drive him this time, his driver on the former occasion having been replaced.

The spokesman of the gang gave Barney and his new driver their final orders.

They were to "drive like h— and stop for nothing." They were to use all possible speed, and, if necessary, ride down anyone who tried to stop them. Every effort was made to impress upon them the urgent necessity for Barney getting outside the State line at once.

The careful preparations which the gang had been making for emergencies along the road were gone over, and it was impressed on Barney and this time he was provided with a driver (without parallel) for skill and daring.

The road over which he was to travel was explained to the driver, who had strict orders not to change the route. The signs by which he would introduce himself to the proper people when he reached his destination, and even the name which he would be expected to use were furnished the fugitive.

Once more Barney shook hands with each of the gang. And once more he began a flight from Massachusetts and the grim shadows of State Prison.

MURDER OF AMERICAN JEWS IS CONFIRMED

New York, July 13.—Confirmation of the report that Professor Israel Friedlander and Dr. Bernard Cantor, prominent Jews of this city, were murdered in the Ukraine, is contained in a cable received from Poland by the joint distribution committee in this city.

Professor Friendlander was connected with the Jewish Theological Seminary and Dr. Canter was associated with Rabbi Stephen Wise of the Free Synagogue. Both were part of the fifty prominent Jews chosen to direct the distribution of food among the suffering Jews of Poland, Austria and other European countries.

Breakfast Cereals Jump Two Cents

Comes now the high cost of cereals to further disturb the housewife whose resources are taxed by the cost of living.

Boston retail merchants are reported to have increased the price of many of the popular brands of cereals two cents. As a result Chairman John H. Sherburne of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life has started an investigation.

Grocers claims that the manufacturers of cereal products report the increase is in accord with other prepared foods and canned products, which recently jumped in cost.

BARE SYSTEM OF AUTO THIEVES

Every Trick and Subterfuge of Famous "Ring" Revealed for First Time

The American publishes today, for the first time in any newspaper, coincidentally with disclosures in the case of Herman L. Barney, the opening instalment of a complete and absorbing expose of the methods used by men identified with the auto thefts syndicate, one of the most vicious, profitable and strongly-organized outlaw traffics in the country, and to the individual car owner, the most annoying and menacing.

The expose is based on the sworn testimony of a confessed member of the Boston ring. To protect the individual car owner, automobile manufacturers and dealers and reputable insurance companies aroused by the revelations in the Barney case, seek the fullest possible investigation to curtail an evil known to be deep-rooted. Public indignation is aroused. Relief is demanded all along the line.

4 TRICKY SYSTEM.

The expose lays bare the tricks and subterfuge not only of the thieves and so-called "go-between," but also of the astute, unscrupulous business men who are willing to "deal" and who take big chances and reap enormous profits receiving and distributing stolen cars, singly and in lots.

It has developed into a cleverly regulated system, a frowned-on by-product of the automobile industry which all law-abiding citizens, and especially everyone who has an automobile or who expects to buy one, wishes to stamp out.

How far they will succeed depends, it is said, on the combined efforts of the police and the courts and all involved business interests in the steps under way for a clean-up campaign. Automobile men say this is the time to strike and strike hard.

The expose shows:

That men who never owned or even drove a car had license numbers registered in their names.

That they used the plates, thus issued, on stolen cars while in their custody.

That plates are juggled from taxicabs and private cars to stolen cars pending delivery to innocent purchasers of stolen cars.

That number plates stripped from stolen cars are thrown into woods and ponds and cesspools when emergency demands.

SALESMEN" AID TRAFFIC.

That stolen cars are known to the gentry as "hot ones."

That "salesmen" deal with the "fences" for the auto thieves.

That they have fixed territories like any traveling salesmen.

That thieves and "fences" prefer to operate with the smaller types of cars, because they look more alike and are harder to identify.

That thieves who take the chance of climbing into a car often in a crowded street in daylight and speeding away, receive comparatively small return, seldom more than $50 or $75 for cars which "salesmen" sell for from $200 to $500 to "fences" who in turn dispose of them all the way from $800 to $1,000 and sometimes higher.

That the gentry use the term "bunk" for commission.

That visits or raids by insurance inspectors and the police are known as "joyrides."

That wheels, windshields, lamps and sometimes radiators are shifted in the camouflaging of stolen cars.

That the chassis of one make of stolen car will be put on the body of another make of car.

That the chassis of a roadster would be placed on the body of a touring car and vice versa.

Providence a Mecca For Stray Girls

Providence, July 13.—"It's different to pick 'em out," is the worried opinion of a police officer who is looking for Edith M. Allen, aged 21, of Lowell, believed to be in hiding here.

The police of Lowell asked local police to try and locate the girl and the local sleuth says the boarding houses are filled with girls who can make a perfectly agreeable answer to any question save giving their proper name. This is the best hiding place in New England for stray girls, say social workers, who declare they will again try to have the lodging houses placed under the jurisdiction of the police. At present lodging house keepers defy the police.

That cars would be retouched and wheels repainted.

That doors would be sandpapered off and the defaced area revarnished.

That the engine numbers would be obliterated and new numbers hammered in with dies.

That operatives in Providence, R. I., with like Hartford, Conn., is one of the most active centres of auto thieves in the country, worked hand-and-glove with operatives in Boston and other parts of New England.

That Massachusetts ranks second in the list of auto thefts, according to statistics compiled by insurance companies, and that Michigan heads the list, with Detroit, one of the greatest automobile centres in the world, the chief mecca for thieves.

That a unit of the Detroit police force does nothing else but hunt thieves and stolen automobiles.

SEEK INFANTRY OFFICER IN CLEW TO MISSING MAN

Manchester, N. H., July 13.—A search of the woods and swamps for the owner of the uniform coat and the watch found on the edge of a swamp in Goffs Falls has as yet disclosed no trace of the man.

A more thorough examination of the coat revealed the name of Lieutenant Waddell, Infantry, on the lining. An attempt will be made to locate Lieutenant Waddell to learn the name of the missing man.

TAXI MAN'S ATTACKERS MAY BE EKLUND SLAYERS

Providence, July 13.—The murder of Oliver Eklund, Providence chauffeur, is recalled by the assault and robbery of Philip Angler, a taxicab driver of this city, who was nearly killed by four men across the State line in Swansea. The attackers of the taxicab man may be implicated in the murder of Eklund in Taunton, the police believe.

WON'T REOPEN DEAN CASE

Attorney-General Young Says He Finds No New Evidence of Value

East Jaffrey, N. H., July 13.—After more than four months of doubt, speculation and suspense, Attorney-General Oscar L. Young has made a cursory negative report on the case involving the murder of Dr. William Kendrick Dean.

He announced in a letter to County Solicitor Roy M. Pickard of Keene, that he had gone to Boston to consult the files of the United States Department of Justice and that he failed to find any new evidence that impressed him. His exact words were:

"The examination of the files did not disclose anything which, to my mind, was of any value."

The taxpayers of this town and licensed Americans all over New England, who for nearly two years have been demanding that the slaying of Dr. Dean by German agents, be avenged, were surprised and disappointed over Young's report, but the selectmen were not. They said they expected just such a finding and that it was in line with everything Young and Pickard have done since the tragedy on the night of August 13, 1918.

The selectmen said that Young had no shot his official eyes to a mass of new and important evidence and nearly two score affidavits, collected since the alleged "whitewash" grand jury inquiry, before he could reach such a conclusion.

YOUNG DELAYED CONFERENCE.

They said he had to ignore the evidence, which Federal experts considered of such importance that an invitation was sent from the office of United States Attorney-General Palmer to Governor Bartlett, advising him that the Department of Justice archives held evidence which, in the opinion of Department of Justice agents who investigated enemy activities in the vicinity of Jaffrey during the war, would greatly assist the State of New Hampshire in clearing up the Dean murder.

Attorney-General Young was promptly instructed by Governor Bartlett to get in touch with the Federal officials in Boston, but Young kept putting off the conference for more than three months on the plea that he was too busy to go to Boston, and in the interim, handled many private law cases, it is alleged.

Attorney-General Young's belated letter to County Solicitor Pickard reads as follows:

Concord, N. H., July 1, 1920.

Roy M. Pickard, Esq.,
Keene, N. H.

"Brother Pickard:

"Replying to your communication of yesterday, will say that several weeks ago I went to Boston, for the purpose of examining the files of the Federal Department of Justice, searching for information relative to the Dean case. The person in charge of the department very kindly gave me copies of such papers as referred to the Dean murder and its investigation.

TO IGNORE GUTERMAN.

"Shortly before the trip to Boston, I received a letter from Mr. Guterman, and replied thereto, suggesting that I contemplated a visit to the Department of Justice and would advise him when it was to be made. A few days later my attention was called to a copy of the [illegible] which contained an exact copy of my letter to him and was prefaced with a headline which, in substance, was that the attorney-general would begin an immediate investigation.

"This somewhat confirmed my previous suspicion that the particular object of Mr. Guterman was to promote the sale of the [illegible], therefore, did not notify him and have carefully refrained from doing anything wherein he suggests that I broke faith, etc. This letter I have not answered and do not propose to.

"For your information, and, in accordance with your request, I am herewith handing you the letter from the Department of Justice, dated March 22, 1920 (note that Young is writing for the first time about this on July 1) addressed to Governor Bartlett. When you have examined this letter, I think you would rather return it, as undoubtedly it ought to be kept in the files here at the State House. If you desire to make a copy, there is no objection.

"The conference with the men connected with the Department of Justice and the examination of the files, did not disclose anything, which, to my mind was of any value. A little later when I have examined the papers more fully, I should be glad to have you read them, if you like. I think that the contents of the greater part of them have already appeared in the [illegible].

"Yours very truly,
"OSCAR L. YOUNG,
"Attorney-General."

Hopkins, director of art in the Massachusetts Normal Art School; Charles F. Whitney, teacher at the State Normal School, and Fred R. Daniels, director of art education in the Newton schools.

MAYOR APPEALS TO WILSON

Asks Him to Prevent Disaster to Boston Inevitable if Coal Shortage Continues

Mayor Peters has personally appealed to President Wilson to prevent the inevitable disaster that faces Boston and New England if the most grave coal shortage is allowed to continue.

Great public suffering and the inability to perform public functions are cited by the Mayor as possibilities arising out of the present situation.

Coal even for the city's present needs is unobtainable, the Mayor states in his message to the President, in which he declares that it is impossible to express himself as forcibly in the message as he could do in a face to face conversation.

Coincidentally the Mayor pictured the situation in a telegram to the Interstate Commerce Commission, a copy of which was forwarded to the President.

NEEDS 85,000 TONS.

"The city of Boston requires 85,000 tons of bituminous coal for various public services, including schools, hospitals, fire and pumping stations and other city departments," the Mayor declares.

He points out that State Fuel Administrator Storrow is unable to afford any relief and that he is appealing to the commission and the President as a court of last resort.

"I am unable to cover the city's needs and can only buy 1,500 tons of probably inferior coal, to cost $20 a ton, for about 10 days in Boston harbor. I have applied to State Administrator Storrow, who can furnish no relief," he says.

While the Mayor does not apply the accusing adjective, the profiteering coal operators whose hands have brought about the situation are touched upon in his message to the commission. He says:

PLENTY AT MINES.

"I understand there is plenty of coal to be had at the mines but that it is impossible to get it to New England because practically all coal usually shipped to New England is going abroad.

"As this is a transportation question I would very much appreciate advice as to what relief will be given as continuation of present conditions makes public disaster inevitable.

"Unless relief is offered, the city faces a situation where it will be unable to perform public functions and without immediate change of conditions danger of great public suffering responds."

Boston schools alone require 40,000 tons of coal and 40,000 tons are required by hospitals, pumping stations, fire and police stations and other public buildings. Only a supply is usually contracted for at this time.

CAN'T MAKE CONTRACTS.

Today it is impossible to make a contract with any of the dealers as they declare themselves unable to see the coal and will not quote prices on any amounts.

The latest contract awarded by the city and approved by the Mayor is for 5,000 tons of egg coal and 10,000 tons of stove coal for the Children's Institutions Department, Deer Island. Island at $14.60 per ton and 350 tons of stove coal at $14.50 per ton for the Long Island Hospital. Both contracts were awarded without advertising to fill immediate needs. An extra charge of $1.50 per ton is added to these prices for labor. The Katy Island Coal Company was the only concern which would quote a price out of six companies appealed to by the City Supply department.

TRAILED ELWELL TO HIS HOME

Turfman Fled from 2 Strangers After Quarrel on Street, Is Report

New York, July 13.—Reports which reached the authorities told of an encounter between Joseph R. Elwell, plain card experts and turfman, and two men who accosted him on Forty-second street near the New Amsterdam roof only a few hours before Elwell was found dying in the reception room of the house in which he lived.

While Elwell was on the New Amsterdam roof on the night of the murder, as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn, according to the story, he was spotted by two "strangers," who were entertaining women. When the Lewisohns left early, the two strangers followed, and they are said to have waited until Elwell said good night to his host and hostess and to Miss Viola Kraus before engaging him in conversation, and finally an argument, on the sidewalk.

A quarrel followed. It was cut short when Elwell sprang into a taxi and directed the driver to go to his home. Then the strangers climbed into a second machine and both went directly to Elwell's home. Beyond that, the story presented to the authorities does not go.

New Hair Growth After BALDNESS

HAIR GROWN ON MR. BRITTAIN'S BALD HEAD BY INDIANS' MYSTERIOUS HAIR GROWER

My head at the top and back was absolutely bald. The scalp was shiny. An expert said that as he thought the hair roots were entirely dead, and there was no hope of my ever having a new hair growth.

Yet now, at an age over 60, I have a luxuriant growth of soft, strong, lustrous hair. No trace of baldness. The pictures shown here are from my photographs.

Indians' Secret of Hair Growth

At a time when I had become discouraged at bring various hair lotions, tonics, specialists' treatments, I was told by a friend, a Cherokee Indian "medicine man" who had an elixir that he guaranteed would grow hair on a bald head but little faith, I gave it a trial. To my surprise, results appeared. It developed, day by day, into a healthy growth, and are long my hair was as prolific as in my youthful days.

Now I am astonished and happy to announce my state of most wildly. Obviously, the hair roots had not been dead, but were dormant in the scalp, awaiting the fertilizing power of the mysterious remedy. I negotiated for and came into possession of the principle for preparing this elixir, now called Kotalko, and later had the recipe put into practical form by a chemist.

Photo when bald. That my own hair growth was permanent has been amply proved. Many men and women, also children, have reported satisfactory results from Kotalko.

How YOU May Grow YOUR Hair

My honest belief is that hair roots rarely die even when the hair falls out through seborrhea, excessive dryness or other disorders. I have been told by experts that often when hair falls out the roots are imbedded within the scalp, covered by hard skin, so that they remain for a time like bulbs in soil. Into a bottle which will grow when fertilized, Shampoos (which contain acids) and hair lotions which contain alcohol are enemies to the hair, as they dry it, making it brittle. Kotalko contains those elements of nature which give new vitality to the scalp and hair.

Phelactine, New Wonder Worker for Hair Growths

(Causes Even the Roots to Come Out)

By an entirely new and perfectly harmless method, any woman afflicted with a growth of superfluous hair can now remove the disfigurement completely—roots included—in just a few seconds. Isn't that glorious news?

The recently discovered phelactine process is altogether different from electrical, depilatory and other methods heretofore employed for the purpose. It is the only thing that enables one to remove roots and all in one's own home without expert assistance. The result cannot be doubted, for the user sees the roots with her own eyes. At a stick of phelactine, with simple instructions, can be procured at any drug store. It is odorless, non-irritating, non-poisonous (a child could eat it without harm). The method is so thorough that the skin is left perfectly smooth and hairless, bearing not the least evidence of its former blemish.—Advertisement.

Can't Dodge Alimony by Wedding Pact

New York, July 13.—Declaring that agreements in restriction of marriage relations are illegal, Vice-Chancellor Griffin in Jersey City refused to recognize an agreement presented by John G. Peppler by which he and his wife were to each pay half the living expenses of their home as sufficient cause to obviate the necessity of Peppler paying his wife alimony pending settlement of her suit for divorce.

The couple were married in 1915 and lived together until 1918. When they were married, the husband maintained, they agreed that each was to pay half of their living expenses and half all expenses incurred in the event a child being born. Mrs. Peppler was to continue to work as a stenographer and Peppler was to follow his scientific bent as a meteorologist.

BOSTON IN NEED OF 4,500 HOMES

Survey Shows Dorchester Lacks 3,000 Houses; Monthly Payment Purchase Favored

A shortage of nearly 5,000 homes in the city of Boston is revealed in the housing survey just completed by the city planning board, covering industrial plants, mercantile establishments, real estate dealers and furniture storage warehouses.

The returns were received from 85 industrial plants employing 29,335 workers, male and female; six mercantile establishments, employing 12,653 men and women, from 32 real estate operators and 19 storage warehouses.

The housing shortage is most acute in that section south of Boston proper, taking in Forest Hills, West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, Roslindale, Dorchester and Hyde Park.

DORCHESTER HARD HIT.

In some section of Dorchester there is a shortage of 3,000 houses. In 1,000 houses, the investigators found; in Jamaica Plain there is a shortage of from 1,000 to 500 houses, and a like number in West Roxbury and Roslindale. In Boston proper the scarcity is estimated at from 500 to 1,000 houses, with little or no space for building.

One Jamaica Plain real estate operator reported that it would be an easy matter to sell 500 six-room houses at $6,000, or the same number of eight-room houses at $8,000, although the double house is the three-family house was generally preferred.

The real estate agents declared that a large majority of the people would gladly purchase their homes if payments could be arranged on a monthly basis.

Practically no plans are being made throughout the city, either by individuals or corporations, for home building, the survey shows. With the exception of East Boston, certain parts of Roxbury, South Boston and Boston proper, there is plenty of land for building at prices ranging from fifteen and one-half to seventy-five cents per square foot.

While the planning board attempts to form an estimate of just as to what sum should be expended to correct the housing shortage, their report declares that an expenditure of $365,000,000 would be required in New England to overcome the deficiency in homes.

FAVOR BUILDING PLAN.

Nearly 50 per cent. of the employers indicated that they would be willing to assist financially in the formation of a housing corporation if law is enacted to meet with their approval. Others, the commission believes, would be willing to join if they knew definitely what was to be required of them.

The survey began six weeks ago and covered 107 industrial plants employing over 50 per cent. of the total number of wage earners, 14 of the larger mercantile establishments, 75 real estate dealers and 25 furniture storage warehouses. The investigators found that 80 per cent. of the industrial workers live in Boston and 45 per cent. of the men and women employed in mercantile establishments.

A large number of families are doubling up, due to the shortage of homes. There is an increase in furniture storages and more permanent storage today than for many years, the board learned from the storage warehouse proprietors. There is also less summer storage, indicating the unwillingness of families to leave their present homes with the chance of finding another in the Fall.

BARONESS ASKS FOR PARDON

Woman Who Helped Husband Burn House Says Her Health Is Poor

Bangor, Me., July 13.—The Baroness De Beck, self-confessed firebug, now physically and mentally broken after several months in jail, where she is serving one year for conspiring with her husband to commit arson, has expressed a wish to appear before Governor Milliken and the Executive Council when her petition for a pardon is heard in Augusta, July 28. Whether or not the request will be complied with is still a question. Sheriff W. O. Fernandez stated that he knows of no authority that can permit a person to leave the jail until the term of imprisonment has been completed.

Baroness De Beck bases her plea for executive clemency on a claim that if she is compelled to complete her term of imprisonment her physical condition will be seriously impaired.

The Baroness, with her husband, Lieutenant Le Roy Nelson, were arrested in Boston last April, charged with burning their home at Carmel, Me. She denied all knowledge of the charge when first arrested, but later confessed and pleaded guilty.

Nelson made an urgent appeal to the court to exonerate his wife from the charge, admitting that he alone was responsible for the burning of their home, and that his wife accompanied to prevent the act. He was sentenced to two years in prison.

Announces Candidacy

Manchester, N. H., July 13.—Thomas J. Conway, inspector on the Manchester Street Railway, has announced that he will be a candidate for State Senator on the Democratic ticket in the 13th District.

Brakes! Autoists Must Stop Hitting Trains

Montpelier, Vt., July 13.—Automobilists in this State have got to stop knocking trains off the track and cutting up didoes with railroad property or suffer the loss of their licenses.

Harry A. Black, Secretary of State, has issued a warning that all drivers will be minus a license if they so much as dare run into a train, this bumping of rail property having become a nuisance hereabouts, he says. Another reason for the new edict is to prevent careless chauffeurs from playing a golden harp before their time.

8,000 ALIENS REACH NEW YORK IN A DAY

New York, July 12.—Arrival here of four transatlantic steamers with more than 8,000 passengers broke all immigration records for one day since the world war. The greater number of the arrivals were in steerage. Of these the majority were former residents of the United States who returned home to join the armies of their respective countries.

GOVERNOR COOLIDGE TO CONDUCT OPEN HOUSE

Plymouth, Vt., July 13.—Open house will be held by Governor and Mrs. Coolidge at the family homestead here on Thursday and a general invitation has been issued to "all Vermonters" to attend. WANDERER WAS BRAVE SOLDIER

Slayer Loved by His Men, Says Private; Is Grilled Anew About Schmitt Girl

Chicago, July 13.—Pictured as a brave soldier, a model officer and an unflinching hero in the world war by a private who fought by his side, and then branded by the police as a gay Lothario and modern Bluebeard, Lieutenant Carl Wanderer, slayer of his bride and "the ragged stranger," underwent another severe grilling.

After he had faced pretty seventeen-year-old Julia Schmitt, the other girl in the case, in the chief state attorney's office, Wanderer turned upon his interrogators.

Meanwhile the grand jury returned two indictments against the prisoner, charging first degree murder. Chief Justice Crowe, of the Criminal Courts, announced that the trial would take place at the "earliest possible moment."

Edward N. Sauter of Gary, Ind., who was a private in a machine gun company in which Wanderer was a lieutenant, today declared that Wanderer's murder confession was quite a shock to him.

"Wanderer was a favorite in his company," Sauter said. "He was a brave man. I have seen him under fire in many engagements and he never flinched. He always was on duty and did it like a patriotic American. He was loved by his men, because, although an officer, he never forgot those in the ranks from which he had risen."

THE DEAF HEAR

Mrs. Etta Wright, 16 Brown St., Cambridge, says: "I had been deaf for 18 years, so deaf that I could not hear anything in my right ear. The left ear was so bad that I would only hear the whistle would shout into it, and—noises! They seemed to me to be all the machinery in the world in my head, all in my head. I read of the Otosmo-Chemic Physicians and the great results they were getting in cases of deafness like mine. I had them treat me. Now I hear again with the right ear and the left ear I hear with perfectly. The noises have disappeared. I am so grateful to the Otosmo-Chemic Physicians for restoring my hearing and banishing the awful head noises that I gladly give this public testimonial that others who are suffering from deafness may profit by my experience."

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required, it makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

WANT CLEMENT TO 'SEE LIGHT'

Suffrage Leaders Undaunted; Prepare to Send Delegation to See Senator Harding

Washington, July 13.—Suffrage leaders of the National Woman's party declared today that they are not daunted by the refusal of Governor Clement of Vermont to accede to the appeal of Senator Harding, Republican Presidential nominee, that he call a special session of the Vermont Legislature to pass upon the Federal woman suffrage amendment.

Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the National Woman's party, announced that efforts would be renewed to make Governor Clement "see the light."

"No refusal by Governor Clement to permit the Legislature of his State to act on the suffrage amendment can be accepted as final when it is in direct opposition to the stand of the party and to the pledge of that party's candidate for the Presidency," he said.

"The Republicans have still the responsibility of finding a way to secure Governor Clement's support as well as the support of the Republican Governor of Connecticut, for the party platform.

TO AGAIN SEE HARDING.

"The National Woman's party will lead a larger delegation than ever to Senator Harding on July 22, to impress him with the necessity of carrying out the suffrage plank and pledges of his party, and enfranchising the women of the nation in time for the coming election."

A hearing was held today before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on application for an injunction to forbid Secretary of State Colby from issuing a proclamation declaring the suffrage amendment ratified.

The injunction was sought by Charles S. Fairchild, of New York, president of the American Constitutional League, and Secretary of the Treasury, under President Cleveland. The injunction seeks to prevent Attorney-General Palmer from enforcing the amendment on the ground that ratification in several States was illegal.

After consultation with Acting Attorney-General Frierson of the Department of Justice members of the National Woman's party stated today that they had received assurances from the Department of Justice that there was little to be feared from the injunction.

PROGRESS IN TENNESSEE.

Progress in the poll of the Tennessee Legislature on the suffrage question by the women's party was announced. Seven more votes are needed now to insure the passage of the nineteenth amendment, it was stated. Confidence is also felt that the required number will be mustered in the lower House to pass the amendment.

Thirty-three House members are pledged out of a necessary fifty votes. Three are non-committal. This leaves sixty-two members undetermined out of whom the remaining eighteen votes may be secured.

Suffragists assert that Senator Simmons of North Carolina, formerly an opponent of suffrage, has become an ardent friend of the cause and is one of the most active workers for ratification.

The opinion was expressed by suffrage leaders in the third party convention is favorable to woman suffrage.

NOMINEES QUERIED ON CIVIL SERVICE VIEWS

Washington, July 13.—Both presidential candidates of the major parties will be asked to state their positions on the respective party platforms dealing with Civil Service, in a questionnaire which has been sent them by the executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes. Announcement of the action was made here by President Luther of the federation. The federation is not entirely satisfied with the planks of either the Republican or Democratic party.

POLITICIAN ACCUSED OF GIVING LIQUOR TO GIRLS

Lawrence, July 13.—A prominent Lawrence politician is charged with treating two girls one aged fifteen and the other aged fourteen, to "moonshine" in a former saloon in the central part of the city, where the two young women were arrested in an intoxicated condition.

Startling revelations are promised at the juvenile session of court here, this week, when the girls are arraigned on charges of delinquency.

After the arrest of the girls the former saloon was raided, but no liquor was found and no one was arrested.

FACTORY WORKERS ARE NOT WANTED ON FARMS

The shutdown of factories in Massachusetts has accounted for an influx of labor to the farms, according to the report of the assistant Federal director-general of labor in the State for the month of June.

That much of this labor flocking to the farm districts is being turned away by the farmers is contained in the report, which states that many farmers have already made their plans for the season.

3-CORNERED CONGRESS FIGHT IN WORCESTER

Worcester, July 13.—John F. McGrath, well-known Worcester attorney, announces his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Fourth Massachusetts district. This seat is now held by Samuel E. Winslow, Republican. Channing Smith, owner of a large Worcester woolen mill, will oppose Winslow in the Republican primaries. McGrath favors amending the Volstead Act so as to permit the sale of light wines, beer and cider.

TEN FACE MOONSHINE CHARGES IN FALL RIVER

Fall River, July 13.—Ten well-known citizens were arrested by Federal officers for having moonshine in their shops where they were supposed to sell only soft drinks. Daniel McCarthy, former court officer, and his clerk, Joseph Lewis, are also charged with assault and battery by striking the officers with a baseball bat. The men will appear before Commissioner Goodspeed of New Bedford.

MISSING GIRL IS SOUGHT HERE

Worcester Mother Pleads for Return of Daughter, Roda Ilvonen, Aged 16

Worcester, July 13.—Missing since June 25, Roda Ilvonen, sixteen years old, daughter of Mrs. Matilda Ilvonen of No. 166 Eastern avenue, has caused her mother to postpone a trip planned for this week to Finland.

Mrs. Ilvonen has unpacked her goods and now intends to wait until she hears from her missing daughter whom she believes to be working in a Summer hotel near Boston.

It is supposed that the girl ran away from home thinking that her mother intended to make her accompany her to Finland. The girl, it is said, wants to stay in America.

Today Mrs. Ilvonen told an American reporter that Roda might stay in America. "All I want is for her to let me know where she is so that I will not worry."

The Worcester detective bureau has been on the case since June 26 but has not picked up a clew.

"I think the American will find her for me," she said. "Roda read the American more than any other newspaper. I wish you would print her picture and state that I am worrying about her and want her to come home to me. All will be well if she only returns."

SAM LIPSKY HELD FOR STORING TAINTED BEEF

Charged with "violation of the health laws by unlawfully placing in cold storage 2,000 pounds of beef intended for human consumption which was diseased, tainted and unwholesome, and decayed in part," by the State Department of Health on July 7, and "for unlawfully holding in cold storage in North street, 24,000 pounds of beef for a longer period than 12 months without permission by the State Department of Health," Samuel Lipsky, of Providence otherwise known as Sam Libby, was arraigned in the Superior Court and held in bail for later trial. He pleaded not guilty.

She was the widow of Colonel S. Van Rensselaer Cruger of New York.

WOMEN TO SHAPE STATE POLITICS

Allen Rules They Can Participate in Convention and Sit on Ward Committees

For the first time in the history of Massachusetts, women will probably take an active part in building the platforms and moulding the policies of both political parties in the coming State election.

Secretary of State Albert P. Langtry has received an opinion from Attorney-General J. Weston Allen, in which the latter states that Massachusetts women may legally participate in the nomination of presidential electors and may serve as delegates to State political conventions or as members of city and ward committees.

Chairman Frank B. Hall of the Republican State Committee and Chairman Michael A. O'Leary of the Democratic State Committee have issued proclamations urging the election of women to these offices.

NO CONSTITUTIONAL BAR.

In his opinion Attorney-General Allen says:

"Ward, town and city committees are political committees to which is vested a share of the government of a political party, but since the members of such committees exercise no portion of the sovereign power, they are not public offices, and the fact that the Legislature regulates their conduct by statute does not make them public offices.

"The constitution both of the United States and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts are concerned with public officers and the right of the elective franchise by which public officials are chosen, but they contain no mention of political parties or the committees or conventions thereof. It is clear that there is no constitutional inhibition against choosing as a committeeman or delegate whatever person the party members desire.

CAN CHOOSE ELECTORS.

"The word 'person,' like the word 'citizen,' is broad enough to include both men and women. I find no good reason for reading a sex limitation into the present section of the law. In some instances the rules and regulations adopted by the committee or convention may be so drawn as to exclude women, but that is a matter for it to decide.

"It is, therefore, my opinion that neither the Federal nor the State Constitution, nor the laws of the Commonwealth forbid women to be members of ward or town committees or delegates to a State convention.

"It already has been shown that our Legislature allows the party to determine who shall vote in the party convention. It follows that women may sit as delegates if the party so permits. On all grounds, therefore, it is my opinion that women may be admitted by a party to its party convention and, if so admitted, may lawfully participate in nominating presidential electors."

Picnic at City Point

Plans have been completed by the South Boston Woman's Club for its annual picnic at City Point tomorrow afternoon and evening.

CHARGES WORCESTER IS MOONSHINERS PARADISE

Worcester, July 13.—This city is a paradise of moonshiners and bootleggers, according to Rev. John Logan Findlay, pastor of the Old South Congregational Church.

Notwithstanding the fact that more arrests have been made so far in July than in any similar period of time since July 1, 1919, the minister charges the police with laxity. "Disgraceful" is the way the clergyman refers to the 122 arrests made during the first twelve days of the month. During the corresponding days last year, when prohibition was new and liquor supplies plentiful, only fifty arrests were made.

COLLEGE GIRLS DISPATCH CLOTHING TO VIENNA

Twelve barrels and twelve boxes filled with clothing and shoes from the wardrobes of college girls in New England colleges, were shipped this week to the University of Vienna, where fourteen hundred girls are in sore need of raiment. Food will be sent later on.

TABULATE PREFERENCE OF LEXINGTON WOMEN

The Women's Republican committee of Lexington is tabulating the political affiliations of the women of the town. It has mailed to the women of Lexington post cards with a return card attached, so they may indicate by a cross what their party preference would be if they now had the right to vote. The cards were sent out by Miss Muriel Childs, chairman of the committee. Miss Marjorie P. Herrick is secretary.

DIEMAKERS ON STRIKE, DEMAND 25 P. C. RAISE

Haverhill, July 13.—The diemakers' strike, a part of the general movement throughout the country, continues in this city. Eighteen members of the craft are on the street, demanding an advance in wages of 25 per cent., an advance to time. University of Vienna, where fourteen hundred girls are in sore need of raiment. Food will be sent later on. $2 to $42 a week.

Leaves $13,000 Job to Wed $2,000 Man

Miss Bessie M. Parker, private secretary to Roger W. Babson, the noted statistician, says she can't keep on working and make a home what it should be for her future husband; so she is sacrificing an annual income of $13,000 to devote herself to housework.

Miss Parker is to become the bride of Elroy L. Powers of Norwood, a $2,000-a-year employe of the Pinkham Press. She believes, she says, that woman's place is in the home. With the income she is giving up, a retinue of servants capable of caring for a mansion could be secured. But Miss Parker thinks that the wife's personal touch and supervision of the household are far more vital than money.

ONE CONNECTICUT JAIL IS TO REPLACE FIVE

Williamantic, Ct., July 13.—Prohibitionists are elated over the report that four county jails are to be closed, and there will be but one left for New London, Windham, Tolland and Middlesex counties. Before prohibition the Windham and Tolland county jails were self supporting, the revenue coming from farm products. Expenses are larger now, because much of this land cannot be tilled on account of the small number of prisoners. Prisoners now confined in the five jails would fill only about three-quarters of the cells in the Windham county jail.

Pension Probe Tabled

The City Council tabled an order of Mayor Peters calling for an additional appropriation of $5,000 to be expended by the Finance Commission in a sweeping investigation of the pension system of the city.

FIGHTING TIGERS BATTLE RED SOX IN BIG SERIES AT FENWAY

DETROIT OUT FOR LEADERS

Jennings Out of Flag Race, Plans to Show Up Stars

By NICK FLATLEY

Hughey Jennings and his Detroit Tigers are parking at the Fenway and promising to restore some of the pep and excitement that was chronic there until this hectic season rolled along. Hughey and the D. T.s are only a step removed from the dungeon at the foot of the league, and hopelessly out of the flag chase, but they are not playing that kind of baseball—now.

They were off to the worst start in the history of the well-known pastime—last thirteen or something in a row—but with the season more than half over, they have recovered slightly and are now playing the brand of baseball that was synonymous with the Michigan village in other years, so to speak.

Here is how the somewhat famous Eh-yah party expresses it:

"I have a good ball team, despite all that has happened to it. We were wrecked at the very beginning when we couldn't get pitching. Constant losing took a lot of the snap out of the outfit, but the return of victory now and then has restored the esprit de corps, which is French for base hits.

Jennings Is Out For New Standing

"We aren't in the race very much but we're out to get as high as possible before the season closes, and we're sure to give all the teams plenty of bother from now on."

That's Hughey's platform, and believing, have dropped down to sixth place, stick to it. But he's likely to meet entanglements right here in our own village.

The Red Sox, crippled and flounder ing, have droped down to sixth place, and do not care to go any lower. They have a wide lead on the Detroiters now, but with the hunks first division only half over, the horrible is a little widening would be very welcome.

With Russell and Hoyt still out of it for some time, the Sox are in a really way for pitchers. They have double-headers tomorrow, Saturday and Monday and Ehmke is one of the bat boys are likely to be called in to do mound duty.

The scouts fail to report much progress from their searches in the brush, and it looks as if Manager Barrow would have to struggle along as best he can.

BRAVES LET HEARN OUT TO THE TORONTO CLUB

Bunny Hearn, Braves pitcher, has been let go to Toronto of the International League. Hearn's name was recently mentioned in connection with some internal trouble in the ranks of the Braves and this may be the reason why he was let go.

Title Race at Revere Tomorrow Night

The first of a series of championship motor-paced races awarded to the Revere bicycle track will be conducted tomorrow night with Clarence Carman, George Wiley, Percy Lawrence and George Chapman meeting in a fifty-mile event for the American title. This is considered one of the big features of bicycle racing.

Wiley already is installed as favorite to win, with Carmon second choice. Lawrence and Chapman have been doing some fast riding on Philadelphia and Providence tracks, and as dark horses have an excellent chance to upset the dope.

DUNDEE CHOICE OVER DOWNES

Lightweights Clash in Big Bout at Armory Club Show Tonight

By JACK CONWAY.

Johnny Dundee will receive a world of opposition when he clashes will Johnny Downes of South Boston in a twelve-round bout at the Armory A. A. show at Mechanics Building tonight. The New Yorker will realize about 9:30 p. m. that it is not the most pleasant thing imaginable to be in a twenty-four foot ring with a twenty-two-year-old youth who is a sterling boxer and heavy puncher.

Dundee cannot hope to keep winning indefinitely. He is human like the rest of our noble ring men and is bound to go down in defeat if his opponent follows the right kind of campaign.

Downes has a better chance of beating Dundee than most lightweights. The South Boston youth is a fast, flashy boxer. He will move around the ring equally as speedy as Dundee, while he will keep shooting stinging blows from every angle.

Maybe Downes will set a pace which will be a little too fast for Jumping Johnny of Big Broadway. When Dundee first showed in this city he could keep hopping around the ring at a dizzy clip for twelve rounds. Then the New Yorker began to age and of late has been resorting more to flatfooted fighting. He tries to dodge blows rather than dance merrily out of the danger zone.

Tommy Marks of the West End and Harry Martin of Providence will clash in the semi-final of eight rounds. There will also be a couple of slaps.

SHARKEY-BURNS FIGHT PREVENTED BY RAIN

New York, July 12.—The bout between Jack Sharkey and Frankie Burns scheduled at the open-air arena of the Armory A. A., Jersey City, last night, was postponed on account of rain. The program will be carried through tonight, weather permitting.

TAD'S TIDBITS

THE GREATEST FIGHTER HE EVER SAW.

Dear Jad:—I've been reading your articles on the "greatest fighter that ever lived," and it seems strange to me that none of your correspondents has named the man who, in my opinion, was the daddy of them all.

My choice is Jack Dillon, nicknamed by the sporting writers "Jack the Giant Killer," and they didn't peg him wrong.

Can you name a big boy that Dillon ever sidestepped? They didn't build them big enough for Jack.

Do you remember over in Brooklyn when he socked Tom Cowler on the chin and sent Jim Corbett into the movie business?

Do you remember the pasting he handed to big Frank Moran at Ebbets Field when they thought it a crime to let Jack fight?

Do you remember what he did to Charlie Weinert, the Adonis of the ring, when they met in Philly?

When he was in his prime Dillon was unbeatable.

Tom Bigger, Boxing Commissioner for the State of Michigan, is with me in this pick and Tom was never on a dead one.

I don't think Dillon's equal has ever been seen.

He was a real fighter, and I'm for real things. I'm against near-fighters and near-beer.

Yours for everything with a kick,

STRONG FIELD IN POLE VAULT

Record in That Event Is Very Likely to Tumble at Olympic Trials

By CHARLES E. PARKER

One of the records that is very liable to tumble from its place in the athletic almanac as the result of Saturday's Olympic tryout meet at the Harvard Stadium is that for the pole vault.

Covered in that most spectacular of all field events are no less than sixteen men, who have topped twelve feet or better during the current season. Included in this number is the present holder of the world's record, and the man who has scored the best indoor leap in the history of the sport, and as both they and fully one-half dozen others have been effecting the best form of their careers this season, good conditions on Saturday should almost guarantee a new record mark in the event.

Of all the events on the Olympic program the work of the Americans in the pole vault has proved the most awe-inspiring to foreign competitors, and foreign perusal of the accomplishments of our pole vaulters on Saturday should occasion much wonderment. The recent British championship event was won with a mark of ten feet six inches, and even at that meager height it was a Frenchman who gained the title.

Foss, Record Holder, Is Favorite

Frank Foss, former Cornell vaulter and holder of the existing world's record of more than nineteen feet, will rule the favorite, but the majority of followers of the sport consider Earl Myers, Dartmouth's intercollegiate champion and holder of the world's indoor record of 12 feet 8 inches, an excellent chance of taking the number. Myers together with Gardner of Yale rank next to Foss in marks made during the current season. Foss, at the Mid West tryouts scored at 13 feet, with Gardner a close-up with 12 feet 8 inches. Myers won the Eastern tryouts with a vault of 12 feet 8 inches.

The leading entrants in the pole vault and their best marks of the current season are as follows:

Frank Foss, Chicago A. A., 13 feet; Earl Myers, Dartmouth, and Gardner, Yale, 12 ft. 8 in.; Landers, Penn.; Jordan, Dartmouth and Knaurck, Illinois A. C., 12 ft. 6 in.; Webber, Yale, 12 ft. 1 in.; Andres, Wisconsin, 12 ft. 3 in.; Peterson, California, 12 ft. 1¾ in.; Harwood, Harvard, Bullock, Penn; Brickley, N. Y. A. C., Westbrook, Michigan, Slaughter, Michigan, Merrick, Wisconsin, and Runyan, N. Y. A. C., 12 feet.

FRIEDMAN DEFEATS ROY MOORE ON FOUL IN 6TH

Rochester, N. Y., July 13.—Abe Friedman of Boston won over Roy Moore of St. Paul in the sixth round on a foul. Up to that time Friedman had the better of the bout.

Cochran Claims Hold on Carpentier Until July, 1921

London, July 13.—"My contract with Carpentier again has been represented in cable from New York by quoting his manager, Deschamps, as saying that Carpentier is tied to me until the end of the year," said Pugilistic Promoter Cochran today.

"The facts are that Carpentier cannot even negotiate this year to fight Dempsey in 1921 unless I am represented. On January 1 next Deschamps will be free to talk to other promoters, but he cannot hold the fight prior to July, 1921, except under my auspices.

"At present the situation is a deadlock. I appreciate Dempsey's wish to fight in the United States, but I hope he will reconsider and come to London."

SAME OLD STORY WITH BRAVES

Nearly Defeat the Pirates in Opener—May Break Spell Today

Pittsburgh, July 13.—The Braves made their sixth attempt to cop a game from the Pirates on Forbes Field today with Oeschger in the box. To oppose Joe, Manager Gibson sent in his portside ace, Wilbur Cooper. So far this season five games have been dropped by the sAbraves in this burg, by scores of 7 to 2, 2 to 1, 5 to 1, 9 to 0, and 3 to 2.

Dana Fillingim pitched a winning brand of ball and yet had most to do with the defeat. In the first inning with first and second occupied, McKechnie bunted right into his hands, and all he had to do was throw the ball to Tony Rosetal at third and force Bigbee. Instead he whirled around twice and finally allowed McKechnie to anchor safe at first, filling the bases. This was followed by an unfortunate play that was meant to be a smart one for the Braves. Maranville signalling for a pitchout so that he might catch Carey at second. Fillingim grooved the ball, and as the Rabbit ran to cover second Cutshaw poled the ball past short for a single and scored two runs.

The winning run, scored by the Gibsonites in the eleventh, was also due in most part to the generosity or carelessness, whatever you want to call it, of the spit ball twirler. He started the rumpus by nicking Grimm on the arm, after getting two strikes and no balls on the batter. Caton laid down a sacrifice, setting the pitcher held. It was too late to catch the runner at first, and it went for a hit. Schmidt moved up the runners and when Nicholson was sent in to bat for Adams, Manager Stallings ordered Fillingim to pass him, which was the proper play. This filled the bases with only one out. But Fillingim got himself into a hole by giving Bigbee three bad balls, and it was up to him to either hook a couple of curves over or groove the ball in hopes of an infield out. He was so nervous by this time that he had the ball so high that Gowdy had to leap to get it.

THE RESTLESS SEX

A Romantic Film Drama With MARION DAVIES

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Watch for This Story in Motion Pictures

"The Restless Sex," soon to be seen in all leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan Production, released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture.

What Has Happened So Far

John Cleland, wealthy widower, with one young son, Jim, adopts a homeless little orphan girl, Stephanie Quest, whose rich great aunt has forgotten her existence. He consults Chiltern Grismer, head of the United Charities, and learns that the girl is a distant connection, with a possible claim on moneys in the Grismer family. Cleland takes her home and Jim greets her with enthusiasm. Grismer tells his son, Oswald, a schoolmate of Jim, to cultivate the latter's friendship on learning that Stephanie's rich relative has become reconciled to her. Meanwhile, Stephanie grows into a beautiful young woman, and Jim is about ready to leave Harvard.

By Robert W. Chambers,

HE wrote several plays, novels and poems to amuse himself; wrote articles for the college periodicals, when he was not too busy training with the baseball squad or playing tennis or lounging through those golden and enchanted hours when the smoke of undergraduate pipes spins a magic haze over life, enveloping books and comrades in that exquisite and softly brilliant web which never tears, never fades in memory while life endures.

He made many friends, he visited many homes; he failed sometimes, but more often he made good in whatever he endeavored.

His father came on to Cambridge several times—always when his son requested it—and he knew the sympathy of his father in days of triumph, and he understood his father's unshaken belief in his only son when that son, for the moment, faltered.

For he had confided in his father the episodes of the punch and the young person. Never had his father and he been closer together in mind and spirit than after that confession.

A Wrong Conclusion

In spite of several advances made by Chiltern Grismer, whose son, Oswald, was also at Harvard and a popular man in his class, John Cleland remained politely unreceptive, and there were no social amenities exchanged. Jim Cleland and Oswald Grismer did not visit each other, although friendly enough at Cambridge. Cleland senior made no particular effort to discourage any such friendly footing, and he was not inclined to judge young Grismer by his father. He merely remained unresponsive.

In such cases, he who makes the advances interprets their non-success according to his own nature.

And Grismer concluded that he had been the victim of insidious guile and sharp practice, and that John Cleland had taken Stephanie to his heart only after he had learned that some day she would inherit the Quest fortune from her eccentric relative.

Chagrin and sullen irritation against Cleland had possessed him since he first learned of this inheritance, and he nursed both until they grew into a dull, watchful anger. And he waited for something or other that might in some way offer him a chance to repair the vital mistake he had made in his attitude toward the child.

But Cleland gave him no opening whatever; Grismer's social advances were amiably ignored. And it became plainer and plainer to Grismer, as he interpreted the situation, that John Cleland was planning to unite, through his son Jim, the comfortable Cleland income with the Quest millions, and to elbow everybody else out of the way.

"The philanthropic hypocrite," mused Grismer, still smarting from a note expressing civil regrets in reply to an invitation to Stephanie and Jim to join them after lunch for a motor trip to Lakewood.

"Can't they come?" inquired Oswald.

A Smart Son

"Previous engagement," snapped Grismer, tearing up the note. His wife, an invalid, with stringy hair and spots on her face, remarked with resignation that the Clelands were too stylish to care about plain, Christian people.

"Stylish," repeated Grismer. "I've got ten dollars to Cleland's one. I can put on style enough to swamp him if I'm a mind to—m-m-m'yes, if I've a mind to."

"Why don't you?" inquired Oswald, with a malicious side glance at his father's frock coat and ready-made cravat. "Chuck the religious game and wear spats and a topper! It's a better graft, governor."

Chiltern Grismer, only partly attentive to his son's impudence, turned a fierce, preoccupied glance upon him. But his mind was still intrigued with that word "stylish." It began to engage him.

He repeated it aloud once or twice, sneeringly.

"So you think we may not be sufficiently stylish to suit the Clelands or that brat they picked out of the sewer? M-m-m'yes, out of an East Side sewer!"

Oswald pricked up his intelligent and rather polished ears.

"What brat?" he inquired.

Chiltern Grismer had never told his son the history of Stephanie Quest. In the beginning, the boy had been too young, and there seemed to be no particular reason for telling him. Later, when Grismer suddenly developed ambitions in behalf of his son for the Quest fortune, he did not say anything about Stephanie's origin, fearing that it might prejudice his son.

A Warning

Now, he suddenly concluded to tell him, not from spite entirely, nor to satisfy his increasing resentment against Cleland, but because Oswald would some day inherit the Grismer money. And it might be just as well to prime him now, in the event that any of the Clelands should ever start to reopen the case which had deprived Jessie Grismer of her own inheritance so many years ago.

The young fellow listened with languid astonishment as the links of the story, very carefully and morally polished, were displayed by his father for his instruction and edification.

"That is the sort of stylish people they are," concluded Grismer, making an abrupt end. "Let it be a warning to you to keep your eye on the Clelands; for a man that calls himself a philanthropist, and is sharp enough to pick out an heiress from the gutter, will bear watching—m-m-m'yes, indeed, he certainly will bear watching."

Mrs. Grismer, who was knitting with chilly fingers, sighed.

"You always said it was God's judgment on Jessie and her descendants, Chiltern. But I kind of wish you'd been a little mite more forgiving."

"Who am I?" demanded Grismer, sullenly. "To thwart God's wrath —m-m-yes, the anger of the Lord Almighty! And I never thought of that imbecile aunt. . . . It was divine will that punished my erring sister and her children, and her children's child"—

"Rot!" remarked Oswald. "Cleland caught you napping and put one over. And now you are properly and piously sore."

"That is an impious and wicked-ly outrageous way to talk to your father!" said Grismer, glaring at him. "You have come back from college lacking reverence and respect for everything you have been taught to consider sacred"—m-m-m'yes—everything! You have returned to me utterly demoralized, defiant, rebellious, changed!

A Bitter Lecture

"Every worldly abomination seems to attract you; you smoke openly in your mother's presence; your careless and loose conversation betrays your contempt for the simple, homely and frugal atmosphere in which you have been reared by Christian people. Doubtless we are not sufficiently stylish for you any longer!" he added sarcastically.

"I'm sorry I was disrespectful, governor."

As a Woman Thinketh

By HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

HURRAH—and, Oh, be joyful!

Marriage is no longer a lottery!

But a sweet and roseate certainty!

The soul-photographer is here, at last!

The perfect X-ray camera, which will truthfully reproduce your fiance's character, disposition, tastes and emotions.

And tell you "before taking" whether he is a fiasco, a fire-eater, a Fido, a fibber, or a financier.

Take him to Paris—and let him be photographed!

But—just a moment, please!

WILL it tell you, I wonder.

Just how many times a week he will be willing to shave—when your kisses have become a daily duty. Instead of a bi-weekly luxury?

Will it tell you how far he keeps the windows open in Winter, and whether or not you will long to divorce him for "incompatibility of temperature"?

Will it tell you how often he repeats the same story in an evening, and how many times you will be expected to laugh at his favorite joke?

Will it tell you whether he is the kind that will get up and make his own coffee in the morning—or the kind that lets one cold muffin and a burnt chop make him act like an early martyr for a week?

Will it tell you how hard he is on his sox, and whether or not he will wipe his safety razor on the embroidered towels?

Will it tell, you whether or not he sings at his bath, and insist on reading the newspaper aloud at breakfast?

Will it tell whether he hoards old shoes, bottle corks, cigarette coupons, odd bits of string, lead pipe, or "fishing clothes"?

Will it tell you whether he is going to open your letters first, or to hand them to you, and then read them chummily over your shoulder?

Will it tell you what kind of tobacco he smokes, and how he looks without a collar?

Will it tell you whether or not he is going to insist on choosing the wallpaper, selecting the brand of your tooth powder, and picking out your hats?

Will it tell you whether he is going to grow fat, or bald, or fussy, or flirtatious—as the years go on?

Of course, it won't!

For, even though it may tell you exactly what he IS, it can never tell you what he is GOING TO BE!

Because every man is a unique chemical combination.

Add matrimony, and you never can foretell WHAT he will turn into.

And that is the thing of which you can be sure is that it will be something different!

So, perhaps, after all,

It's just as safe to pick out your future mate, by flipping a coin, or counting the buttons on his coat—

"Eenie-meenie-minie-mo—You're it!"

As to have him X-rayed,

And soul-photographed!

Smart Wraps for Summer

By Rita Stuyvesant

THE newest wraps for town and country wear combine individual style with the greatest comfort.

A smart wrap cut from sand-colored French serge is practical. One model of this type assumes the lines somewhat of a dolman, deeply collared and slit for the arms to pass through. It narrows a little toward the feet, and is lined throughout with a pretty figured silk of tan and black. One of the unusual features is the absence of buttons or other fastenings. With true Parisian charm does Milady "wrap" herself and then clutch languidly at the front of the garment to keep it closed. However, in free moments it swings quite gayly from her slim shoulders, showing its smart lining.

These wraps with a little more weight are fashioned in broadcloth, tricotine, Summer velour, duvetyn and suede cloth. Sometimes there is no lining at all in these heavier wraps.

An interesting wrap is of dull black satin cut rather full with the flare of a cape. At the shoulders is another short cape banded several times in black velvet. The armholes are cuffed also in black, but the entire cape is lined with orange satin, and may be reversed for formal evening wear.

This wrap might show its dark side in town and when motoring, but be quite right at the shore. Turquoise blue or rose would also be suitable for lining.

A Tip Worth While

Wife—Oh, I've found out the most awful thing! Mrs. Littleton's daughter is quietly preparing to elope with her fiance, instead of waiting for another year, as she promised. I must run over and warn her mother!" Husband—For goodness sake, don't say a word! If they elope we shan't have to give them a wedding present.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND McCormack

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

McCORMACK.
VARIATIONS—McCormick, McCormac.
RACIAL ORIGIN—Irish.
SOURCE—A given name.

IF you know that "corb" is the Irish word for chariot you have the whole solution of the origin of the family name of McCormack.

It a literal analysis of the name were permissible, you would divide it something like this: "mac-car(i)-mac." And substituting the English words you would have, "son-chariot-son." A more free translation would bring out the meaning: "descendant of a charioteer's son."

But, while the literal translation of the name may be very interesting, it's not strictly accurate as a history of its development into a surname.

Like virtually all Irish family names, it originated as an explanation of parentage rather than as a description of occupation, personal characteristic or locality of residence. Cormac was a very popular given name among the ancient Irish. Indeed, it is widespread today. It is a name closely associated with the historical legends of the "Green Isle," and was borne by so many christains and kings that it is not possible to trace all the Cormac clans back to a single progenitor and his organization of followers, as is the case in a great many of the Irish and Scottish family names.

A daughter, Muirne (Morna) of one of the ancient Cormacs is particularly famous in legend by reason of a battle to the death staged by two rivals for her hand. Unfortunately, the warrior of the lady's secret choice failed to win, and when the sorely spent victor threw himself at her feet she seized his sword and slew him.

The McCormicks are Scotch-Irish stock, from the race of Scottish settlers who took over the lands of two Irish Earls, in the north of Ireland, who had been dispossessed by the Crown. Of a fervent religious nature, they migrated to America when religious conditions in Ireland no longer squared with their convictions.

In Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, by the banks of the Susquehanna and in Delaware, these first McCormicks in America settled, waging manful war with primitive conditions and wild Indians. John and Samuel McCormick, in Cumberland County, are the first of the family in America. They were men of character, leaders in building a fort, named after them, also a court house and a jail.

Little is known of these personally, but, by the records, the children of the first John were John Jr., Margaret, Elizabeth and two others. These McCormicks are the ancestors of most of the McCormicks in America.

How to Cleanse Silk

Spirits of turpentine will remove most spots from silk, but care must first be taken to see that the dye is fast. It is well to experiment first on a spare piece of the fabric. Rubbing this, powdered French chalk, mixed to a mustard-like consistency with lavender water, should be rubbed into the stain, left till caked, and a hot iron laid on a sheet of blotting paper—finally passed over the top. An ounce or oil of turpentine is an old-fashioned remedy for stained silks.

When Hearts Are Trumps

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"CYNTHIA! Don't talk nonsense!. The child came to me first—as to her guardian—the one who stands in the place of a father to her. That was right and proper.

"Moreover, you learned beforehand from her own lips how she felt. I did not. And I forbid you to show to her, by so much as a sign, your displeasure at an act that meets with my entire approval. Understand?"

Yes, Arthur was roused. His sister had not seen him like this for years. She remembered the warning about "the wrath of a patient man." Being a wise woman, she capitulated in as good order as was compatible with dignity.

A Female Diplomat.

"My dear brother, you misjudge me sadly if you fancy that I would mar the child's happiness by even a hint of what I have expressed to you. And I see that you are right.

"As she confessed to me her sentiments about this growing love affair, I suppose she thought it only right to tell you when the betrothal was an accomplished fact. Neither you nor I must intimate to her that we could ever be anything but delighted at her choice. It would be most unkind."

"It certainly would! That is what I have been telling myself ever since you informed me how matters were going. And I can say truthfully that her happiness is all I wish for, and that she is going to marry one of the finest men I know. Indeed, I have already told her all this."

"And I will run up to her room and repeat it on my own account," Cynthia said.

Her manner was conciliatory and placid now. Although she usually held the reins of government, she knew when to let her brother take them. In the doorway she paused. "Would it not be natural for John to ask your permission to marry your niece? In our day it was done."

"And in this day, too, my dear. John is to call this evening."

"Of course he would do the proper thing," the woman observed. "I might have known that. I am glad."

"Well, I am not!" her brother said. "I wish the infernal interview were over!"

But Miss Paige thought it wise to ignore this outburst.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

BARBARA sighed impatiently at the sound of her aunt's rap on her closed door.

Miss Cynthia did not usually preface her entrance by knocking. In the instant before answering Barbara reflected that perhaps this new formality was due to the fact that by her engagement the niece had acquired dignity in her relative's estimation.

"Come," the girl called.

She was hanging her coat up in the closet when Cynthia entered. She took longer about doing this than was absolutely necessary. She was steeling herself to receive courteously and gently any remarks that might be made to her.

She was agreeably surprised when on emerging from the closet she saw her aunt's face wreathed in smiles.

"Dear child!" the spinster exclaimed, putting her arms about her niece. "I am so thankful for you. Arthur has told me that you are engaged, fast and firm."

"Yes, I suppose I am," Barbara said politely.

"Oh, my child, so happy!" Cynthia clasped her hands, as if to convey by this dramatic gesture how inexpressibly great was her brother's delight. "Indeed, dear, this is a wonderful day for us all. But"—patting the pale cheek with a bony forefinger—"you are still too close to it to be able to realize what it means. It must always be like that at first."

Not Very Enthusiastic

"Perhaps so," Cynthia rejoined. "But I do not mean to seem ungrateful for all the kind things that you and uncle feel. I am glad you both are satisfied. That is my main desire."

"Dear child." Miss Cynthia protested, "you must not talk like that! It would wound your uncle if he could hear you. It sounds as if you had been driven into a marriage against your will, and that is not true. Nobody ever coerced you into this engagement. You went into it of your own volition, as you know, and of course the fact of your uncle's satisfaction and approval adds to our joy.

"As for me, I must confess that I have a deep feeling of peace about you now. For you will be provided for and will have a good husband. Think what it would have been if you had become engaged to some fickle flirt—like that good-looking young Elliot, for instance."

"And, by the way," hastily, "I shall be delighted to have Mary James know that you are engaged to Mr. Brandon. That will change her silly idea that she can go out with Robert Elliot. I suppose his manner made her fancy that he was amusing himself with you."

"I wish," Barbara said each word falling from her lips slowly and bitterly, "that I might never have to hear anybody mention him again. I am tired of hearing about him."

"Oh am I!" her aunt agreed. "So much ridiculous nonsense has been talked about him to you—as if what he did or where he went concerned you one way or the other, except as he is a boy friend to whom you have been kind.

The lovely clear colors you could never get before

A SOFTER pink for your faded georgette—a clearer blue for your yellowed crêpe-de-Chine than you have ever been able to get before. Lovelier shades of every color—with the new colored flakes, Twink.

Twink is made by a wonderful new method for producing colors that makes it possible to get more exquisite shades than have ever before been obtained.

When it was found that in this product any fashionable shades could be produced, the color authorities of the country were asked to select the loveliest and smartest colors for this season. Twink was then made to match these colors.

The bright flakes dissolve instantly in boiling or very hot water and whip up into a shining lather. You put in your faded blouse, your yellowed chemise. And when you take it out of the Twink suds the blouse is the same lovely lavender as when you bought it—the chemise is a delicate pink.

Every one of the Twink colors is so fast that you can wash your blouse several times before it needs to be Twinked again. Twink will not hurt any fabric that water alone will not hurt.

Get Twink today from your druggist, the department stores, or the 5 and 10 cent stores, and just follow the surprisingly easy directions that come with the package. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

OIL AND RAIL ISSUES UP

Steels and Equipments Improve During the Forenoon; Motors Inclined to Sag

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were rather strong in New York at noon, having rallied in the second hour. Oils were the leaders in the advance, with rails showing a slight gain. Steels and equipments improved during the forenoon, while motors were inclined to recession. They were at their best at the end of the morning, however. Trading was not voluminous. For several days, first hour transactions totalling about 100,000 shares, small movements within the range of foreign exchange showed little change, and opening rates were a middle lower.

Utilization of oil had a wide range, declining six points and not moving even that far from last showing, more than three points gain at noon. Mexican Petroleum advanced almost five and Pan American Petroleum Atlantic Gulf and United Fruit were also notable.

OPEN MIXED, SELL HIGHER.

At the opening prices were irregular as to gains and losses, but the tone of the list was good. Within minutes before there was a halt and trading slackened. The early advance was attributed to buying by professional operators. They continue to make the market. The continue to make the market. The public began to buy last week has died out. Stromberg gained more than five points by a rapid advance and lost ground quite as quickly. Iron and steel fractions below Monday's final figure. International Paper moved up two points and showed more stamina. Among issues to rise and fall were Car & Foundry, Baldwin, Crucible, Reading, American Woolen and Sumatra. Vanadium. Traders did not delay long in taking profits. The first hour's activity was indecisive to a degree.

Before the end of an hour the trend was well upward. This showed early strength, but motors, steels and equipments soon were in control. Canadian Pacific and Reading were strongest rails. Gains were the rule in the carriers, but averaged small.

RAILS IN MORE FAVOR.

While industrials have been reaching up to new high records, and new low priced ones, have been more active and in more demand than at any other time this year, rails have been neglected by comparison. It is generally believed as well as apparent that rails have been accumulating such securities for quite a long time, and that when they see them better standing with investors are confidently looking for a time when they will be affected by unfavorable reports regarding both the trade situation and the railroad situation when gross are being made by railroads, and "frozen credits" situation.

Political conditions and the approaching election. Neither of the old parties is confident as to election results and the chief issue, the railroads, is getting more attention on Wall Street than in any other section of the country, until all dissatisfied elements at the polls will prove itself formidable. The feeling is rampant in this country as well as in Europe.

RAILROADS MUST RAISE $140,000,000 IN 1920

Before the end of this year railroads must raise $139,961,130 to provide for securities maturing or due within five months. Among the big issues which must be refunded in the three-year term for $20,000,000, due September 1; for $14,891,000, due September 15; Chicago & Western Indiana extended 5 per cent. notes for $15,000,000, due September 1; and New York Central's one-year 6 per cent. notes for $15,000,000, due September 15.

The $129,961,130 maturities to the end of the year comprise $16,437,990 August 1, $15,523,140 October 1, $77,245,320 November 1 and 15, and $20,381,820 in December.

STEEL COMMON STOCK FAVORED BY INVESTORS

The curtailment of holdings of Steel common by New York investors is taken as a gaining factor with the securities by floating supply in the small lots. Since January 1 of this year there being but 1,631,366 shares out of a total of 3,500,000 in the hands of brokers on margin, a decrease of 1,868,634 shares, which action has been taken since the first of last month were but 22.59 per cent of the total, whereas at the end of 1919 they held 46.59 per cent of the total.

Foreigners have been selling Steel common and are reported to have sold 200,000 shares. This is due to financial necessities resultant from the war. Domestic holdings have increased by over totaled 242,567, a decrease of 5,629 in three months.

Latest Cotton Crop Estimate

The latest cotton crop estimate is from Memphis and has to do with conditions as of July 1. It places condition on July 1 at 77.8, compared with 72.6 on June 1 and 78.1 on July 1, 1919. This is due to financial necessities resultant from the war. The weather has been favorable for cotton throughout the entire belt and the crop has made good to excellent progress everywhere with a few local exceptions.

PICKFORD IN GITZ RICE IN 'SUDS' A FINE BILL AT HIT

Mary Pickford's unusual make-up and her delineation of the character of Amanda, the laundry slavey, brought forth many enthusiastic comments from the audience which assembled at the Majestic Theatre yesterday. That Mary, the prize beauty of the screen, should so transform her real self in order that the character should be properly played and developed to the artistic triumph the production achieves, was said by many to be a great stride forward in photoplay advancement.

In "Suds" the exhibitors commented enthusiastically on Miss Pickford's abrupt and probably history-making departure from the conventional screen plots for feature stars. Gone are the beautiful clothes, except in a retrospect—gone is the conventional triumph of beauty and virtue although the story has a happy ending, none is the usual backwash "final clinch." All of these departures from the usual were gladly received, and appreciated by the audience.

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA—If it is reasonable to judge a picture's success by the attendance it draws, "The Mollycoddle," Douglas Fairbanks' latest production which is at the Olympia's Scollay Square Olympia, is destined to qualify as a sensation. The Olympia Weekly, and big vaudeville program, together with other attractions complete the bill.

STRAND, UPHAMS CORNER—It is doubtful if ever the people of Dorchester have been wrought up to such a state of enthusiasm over a moving picture production as they did in the return engagement of Mary Pickford's greatest triumph, "Daddy Long Legs," which was shown at Gordon's Strand, Uphams Corner, last evening.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA—Katherine MacDonald, popularly termed "the American beauty," and whose entrance into film stardom has been recorded unprecedented approval among local photoplayers and enthusiastically received last evening at Gordon's Olympia in her latest First National picture, "Fashion's Playground," adapted from the famous novel, "The Gamut of Emotions," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson.

Wearing gowns that were especially designed for this production and appearing in her most famous characterization as the unsophisticated convent girl and later the winner of Monte Carlo's greatest prizes, Katherine MacDonald's role in "Fashion's Playground" bids fair to win her thousands of additional admirers.

GLOBE THEATRE—Gladys Brockwell in her latest photoplay creation, "A Sister to Salome," is an excellent bill at Loew's Globe Theatre the initial half of this week and unstinted praise is one of the requisites for the lavish manner in which it has been turned out.

COLUMBIA THEATRE—Yesterday's program at Loew's Columbia Theatre was headed by Corrine Griffiths in "Baby Candidate" and Vivian Rich in "A World of Folly," also amateur vaudeville. Robert Warwick will be shown today in "Human Driftwood" and Jackie Saunders in "Bab the Fixer." High class vaudeville will be offered in the evening.

ORPHEUM THEATRE—Yesterday's entertainment at Loew's Orpheum Theatre included an all-star vaudeville program with such popular players as Jean Mc'Coy, and Ralph Wallen in "A Few Moments with Quinlo," and it may truthfully be said that the only question has not been overworked in the two-a-day and for that reason it offered a few moments of pleasant diversion; Al. H. White and company, in their comedy drama "The Mirror," and this has been seen in this city before it is the type of playlet that always pleases and Helen Moretti, the Italian Nightingale, in some of her most charming selections, made a decided attraction. "A Sister to Salome," was indeed the crowning vehicle of Gladys Brockwell's brilliant career.

CAMBRIDGE CENTRAL SQUARE—"The Best of Luck," the Metro presentation of the celebrated Harry Lane melodrama, was shown yesterday at Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre and proved to be a feature attraction of superlative merit. Done on a comparatively simple swiftly-moving story is fairly packed with excitement, sustained action, and nerve-chilling thrills. The all-star cast appears in "The Host of Luck," which was produced by Screen Classics, Inc., and supervised by Maxwell Karger.

MODERN AND BEACON — Ethel Clayton has undertaken to portray five domestic roles which have characterized her last few pictures in "The Ladder of Life" which began at the Modern and Beacon Theatres last evening.

PARK THEATRE—A new policy of a complete change of program three times a week presenting new feature pictures on Monday, Wednesday and Friday with Summer prices was inaugurated at the Park Theatre yesterday. The performances are continuous from 10.30 a. m. to 10 p. m. The feature picture yesterday and today is McLean and Stay in "23½ Hours Leave." Tomorrow and Thursday, Dorothy Dalton in "Moonlight Trails" will be the attraction and Friday and Saturday Dixie Ferguson in "Witness for the Defence."

Flying Stunts at Revere Beach

Lieutenants R. C. Moffatt and T. J. Elliott continue to thrill the crowd of spectators that frequent Revere Beach with their daring feats performed with the especially constructed monoplane, Daredevil Jack Murphy, the world famous airplane jumper, who makes a descent every evening at 9 o'clock, holds the crowds spellbound.

Pemberton Inn

Three sterling entertainers have been added to the ten all-star Melody Boys at Pemberton Inn, Mildred Gifford, a delightful singer; Billy Wells and Rita Townsend, dancers, are the pleasing additions to the entertainment program at this favorite eating place of the fashionable South Shore.

Paragon Park

The new big $100,000 feature at Paragon Park, "The Witching Waves," has created a sensation at this popular resort.

BURY BOY VICTIM OF AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

The funeral of George McGlynn, fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Micheal McGlynn, No. 5 Albemarle Street, Readville, was held from the home of his parents today. A requiem high mass was celebrated in the Church of the Most Precious Blood at 8 a. m. by Rev David F. Regan. Burial was at Fairview Cemetery, Hyde Park. The McGlynn boy was a victim of an automobile accident at Canton, Funeral services for Michael Mack, thirty-eight years old, also killed in the tragedy, will be held at the same church tomorrow. Mack, who died at the Canton Hospital, lived at No. 42 Blanchard street, Readville, and was a veteran of the World War.

Tremont Temple

No woman in the world has been more written about in all languages, in books, magazines and newspapers than Helen Keller, the famous blind and deaf American girl, who will be seen at Tremont Temple beginning Monday, July 19 in the latest big achievement, the motion picture "Deliverance," which is said to be a marvel from every viewpoint.

HELP A FUNNY CHAP.

When it comes to action, Marry Delf.who has a reputation as a song writer, is the Douglas Fairbanks of the stage. He provides many a chuckle by his impersonations. Greenleaf and Drayton are here in songs, jazz dances and conversation in five languages. Al Lydell and Carleton Macy have a sketch in which they portray two veterans of the Civil War, one representing the army and the other the navy. Lida Leah takes the part of a Red Cross nurse. Then there are Lillian Herlein, assisted by Earl Thurstensen, in a cycle of songs; the Blue and Mott Trio of wire dancers, and Elsie La Sergere and her three posing dogs.

Plays That Remain

WILBUR THEATRE—Charles Purcell in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" with Andrew Tombes, make their final bow at the Wilbur Theatre next Thursday night, bringing the unusually successful Boston engagement of Lew Fields' musical comedy to an end after exactly eight weeks Friday and Saturday the production will play in Stamford, Ct., and it then goes to Atlantic City and later to Broadway.

TREMONT THEATRE—The eleventh week of "Mary" began at the Tremont Theatre last evening. There seems to be no abatement of the zeal by this Cohan musical production, and, like hot or cold in Boston, as all the same time, the Tremont is the coolest of theatres, and the show moves as swiftly and entertainingly that in the spirit of having a good time there are no discomforts felt.

TREMONT TEMPLE—The last week of the big double feature motion picture bill at Tremont Temple began yesterday at Boston Indeed are two such colossal features as Theda Bara in "Kathleen Mavourneen" and the elimination of Longfellow's immortal "Evangeline" offered on the same program.

Wilson's Russian Policy Deserves Special Niche in Hall of Infamy

The National Administration has at last decided to lift the American blockade against Russia. There never was anything more unjust, illegal, inexcusable and barbarous in American history than this attempt by the American Government joining with the imperialist nations of Europe to starve the Russian people into submitting to foreign dictation as to their form of government and to foreign exploitation of their natural resources.

The Administration, incited, of course, by our big financial interests, which, in turn, were incited by the British financial interests, of which they are a branch, trailed along behind the policy of the British Government in these barbarous, coercive measures against an unoffending, friendly people.

In the course of the blockade we not only denied to 150,000,000 white people food that they needed and machinery and locomotives which they needed to produce and to transport food, but we denied them medicines. We can measure the extent to which this was uncivilized treatment of Russia by an appalling and startling incident which occurred more than a hundred years ago.

Great Britain was then actually at war with France, as America is not and has not been at war with Russia. The French revolutionary forces had been victorious on every battlefield, and had enlarged their boundaries by annexations beyond the greatest former boundaries of France, even after the victories of Louis IV. and Marshal Tourenne.

Russia, since the revolution, though victorious on almost every battlefield, has made no annexations, but has freely given up territory that for years belonged to Russia, when the inhabitants of that territory, exercising the right of self-determination, indicated a desire to separate from Russia and to set up their own Government.

The British issued their orders in council to the British Navy to blockade the French ports and to deny the French people every necessary of life. The great Whig party denounced these blockade orders because they affected not only soldiers, but women and children.

The men who led in the denunciation were the greatest men in England, and the party which they represented came into power within six years after this blockade was begun. Two of these leaders became Prime Ministers.

This measures the distance we have retrogressed in a hundred years.

But when we describe the cruelty and injustice of the blockade, we do not tell the whole story. Sometimes an act can be cruel and unjust, and yet from a selfish point of view can be not unintelligent, but our autler's participation in the blockade was unintelligent, as well as brutal and unjustified. We had nothing to gain by it from a selfish viewpoint, and we have lost everything.

We not only have trailed England by participating in this blockade, but we have trailed England in its abandonment. We have lost opportunities of trade with Russia amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars, which Great Britain, by an earlier resumption of trade, has seized before us. British business agents are everywhere in Russia forestalling the markets with long-time contracts, while American business men have been denied even passports to Russia.

Americans who ought to have profited most from the Russian revolution and its consequent release of the great energy of the Russian people have profited least. Americans, for whom the Russians had a sentimental attraction, peculiar and strong, have been threatened with a loss of that friendship—a loss which is not only spiritual, but material; for the sentimental attachment of a great people is one of the most material assets a nation can have, both in commerce and in war.

Asia and eastern Europe are the great unexploited fields of the world. It is there that the struggle for trade will take place, and the friendship of the Russian people, occupying four-fifths of eastern Europe and half of Asia, will be a very material aid to the nation that enjoys it.

Moreover, if we should ever have a war with Great Britain and with Japan, her ally, the friendship of the Russian people would be great and perhaps a decisive aid.

This valuable friendship the Administration under President Wilson has done everything it could to destroy by every kind of faithlessness and brutality. Succeeding instances of President Wilson's violations of his own professed ideals and principles have long ago ceased to be noteworthy. But the Russian policy has been so much worse than all the other instances of the President's bad faith that it deserves a special niche in history's hall of infamy.

Railway Officials Converted to Public Ownership

Twenty years ago the shipper with the pull got empty freight cars to haul his goods, and the shipper without a pull got—left.

Priority of service was then a perquisite, to be bestowed sometimes corruptly; but always arbitrarily.

The change which two decades have wrought in the public conception of the function of transportation is shown in the suggestion of Daniel Willard, chairman of the advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives, that priority of service in favor of the more essential commodities be established during the present transport shortage, not by decree of the railway executives, but by decree of the Interstate Commerce Commission, a public authority.

President Willard would not, if he could, have this tremendous power controlled by private interest, as it was controlled for many years. He knows that it is too vast a power, affecting the life or death of business, to be exercised by any but public authority.

Thus step by step one railroad expert after another—even the chosen spokesmen of private ownership, like Daniel Willard—is convinced by experience or reason that railroads are no longer in any proper sense private enterprises.

It is only the desire for private profit that remains as the vital motive behind private ownership, and that is not as hopeful as it used to be.

More Truth Than Poetry

Mustapha the Magnificent

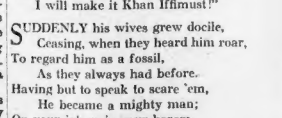
By S. E. KISER

ONCE, in distant Asia Minor,
Dwelt the satrap Mustapha Kahn;
He had wives—there were some nine or
Ten who worried the luckless man.
Poor old Mus! They kept his harem
In an uproar night and day;
He could neither coax nor scare 'em,
Each was bound to have her way.

MANY times he tried to teach them
To be sisterly and meek,
But his reason failed to reach them,
Wisely though he tried to speak;
When his back was turned they hurried
With their jabber, pulling hair;
Mus, as you can guess, was worried,
Often he was in despair.

ONE day, when his wives had nearly
Driven reason from his mind,
Mus found courage, seeing clearly
That to which he had been blind.
"It's my name that's queered me, curse it!"
He exclaimed in deep disgust;
"Mustapha Kahn! I'll just reverse it;
I will make it Khan Iffimust!"

SUDDENLY his wives grew docile,
Ceasing, when they heard him roar,
To regard him as a fossil,
As they always had before.
Having but to speak to scare 'em,
He became a mighty man;
On your job or in your harem,
Brother, if you must, you can.



Letters to the Editor

Children Barred

Editor Boston American:

I was much interested in reading your article in Friday's edition of American relative to so many people adopting children.

Would like to know, however, if people who are adopting children can tell me (unless they own their own houses) where they are finding a home for them.

When one goes to hire today, the first question is "have you any family" and in nine cases out of ten if you reply "yes" you haven't a ghost of a chance to get the place. C. D. BROOKS.

Coastwise Shipping

Editor Boston American:

I believe that there is a clause in the Monroe Doctrine which prevents foreign interests from operating our coastwise shipping. Now if the "League of Nations" is adopted and the Monroe Doctrine is laid aside will not the British on the East Coast and the Japanese on the West Coast wipe out American competition?

They operate their ships much cheaper than Americans and can sell American manufactured goods in their own countries at much lower prices than the same articles are sold here. Can you explain why a man who knows that these things are so will try to push the League of Nations through without reservations? I know that American-made goods are purchased at lower rates in foreign countries.

Come Into the Laundry, Maud

The origin of the phrase, "All men kill the thing they love," guesses M. H. K. Well, the laundries are offering to share the obloquy, since half of them advertise: "Don't kill your wife. Let us do the dirty work."

—By K. C. B.—

Dear K. C. B.—Shame upon you! You steal into the McAdoo place on Sunday afternoon and find the Lady of the House on a croquet court and come away and blazon it forth to the world! Shame upon you!

Huntington, L. I. ANNA R.

MY DEAR Anna.
AND I did see her.
AND HOW I knew it.
WAS THAT there were wickets.
AND A couple of stakes.
AND I never said.
SHE WAS playing croquet.
FOR WITHOUT a mallet,
SHE COULDN'T play.
AND I saw no mallet.
AND I saw no balls.
BUT JUST the lady.
OF THE McAdoo house.
A GRACIOUS lady.
WITH A pleasant smile.
FOR A poor, strange man.
WHO HAD driven right in.
TO THE lady's yard.
WITHOUT BEING asked.
AND WAS made to feel.
THAT IT didn't matter.
AND WAS quite all right.
IN SPITE of the fact.
THAT HE blocked the road.
AND MADE Bill back out.
THE SAME being William.
OR MR. McAdoo.
AND NOW you come.
AND CRY me shame.
THAT I have told.
WHAT I have told.
AND LISTEN, Anna.
ON THAT same Sunday.
I FOUND a minister.
AN EPISCOPAL minister.
DOWN IN the cellar.
OF THE rectory house.
AND IF I told that.
YOU'D PROBABLY figure.
HE'D GONE down there.
FOR A bottle of something.
OR WAS hiding the collection.
OR SOME such thing.
WHEN ALL he had.
WHEN HE came up.
WAS A jar of jam.
FOR THE supper table.
AND, ANYWAY, Anna.
YOU NEVER can tell.

I THANK YOU.

LITTLE FEAR LIGHTNING WILL HIT AUTO

By Garrett P. Serviss

"What is the best and safest thing to do when driving an auto on country roads in thunderstorms and lightning? Is it best to keep moving or should one shut off the power? Does the running of the motor draw the lightning?—C. L., Chicago."

IF I were caught in a thunderstorm while driving an auto I should keep going until a convenient shelter was found. The action of the magneto might be affected, but I do not believe that there would be any greater danger of being "struck by lightning" while the auto was in motion than while it was standing still. Railroad trains and trolley cars do not stop in a thunderstorm, and I know of no evidence tending to show that they invite lightning strokes.

Being connected with the rails and wires they have, perhaps, some advantage over an auto in that they have a readier means to get rid of any electric charge tending to accumulate upon them. In either case it is imaginable that the motion of the object may have a tendency to prevent such accumulation; not, of course, because a machine, however speedy, can run away from lightning, but because the continual change of place may interfere with the local conditions favoring the formation of a charge.

With regard to what constitutes the best shelter from lightning there are differences of opinion arising from the imperfect state of our knowledge concerning the precise conditions prevailing at and around points where lightning "bolts" strike.

The entire subject is involved in a cloud of symbolical and analogical terms, based upon theoretical conclusions and inferences, and often serving no other purpose than to convey a mental picture of what seems to occur. Thus we speak of lightning "striking," but the word may be very far from expressing what actually happens, and lightning is certainly not a "bolt." So, too, we speak of a lightning rod as "drawing off" the charge from the clouds.

This is another phrase that merely tells what appears to happen, or, rather, it is used in an illustrative sense, just as is the word "current" and the word "flowing," when speaking of electricity in motion. Even this last phrase, "electricity in motion," is an adaptation intended to supply a mental figure of a process which we do not know how otherwise to describe.

WHAT ABOUT THE MONEY YOU SPEND YOURSELF?

You must expect, old man, that that little wife of yours is going to complain if you talk constantly about reducing expense and she knows that you take trips with men which cost you more than she can possibly save by the strictest kind of economy.

Naturally she is going to conclude that she is not going to scrape and save and deny herself things she wants if you use the money to entertain yourself and your friends so lavishly.

Before you censure your wife for extravagance, look at your own expense account and see whether or not your own side is cut down to the lowest possible figure.

It is not sufficient that you save, perhaps for some months, and then in one trip spend what you have accumulated by your self-denial.

Some men act as if it burned in their pockets when they get a little money together, and they are all the time planning how to spend it.

But this does not get a man's wife anywhere, nor is it giving her a square deal, for she wants a genuine saving, something which can be put into an investment, or the bank or a home or other substantial saving.

Plan expenditures for two, not for just your selfish self.

GIRLS URGED TO ADOPT HIGHER IDEALS

By Beatrice Fairfax

THE heroine of the story was young and beautiful and rich and possessed of whatever is current today for the "good breeding," once supposed to be a requisite for heroines of impeccable social position. And the most important content of her vocabulary was:

"Shut up!"

That was almost inevitably her rejoinder to any suggestion made by the poor gentleman who happened to be her guardian and her uncle. When any situation arose to threaten her own selfish certainty that whatever she wished ought to be hers and whatever anyone else wished for her ought to be flung overboard, she disposed of it by a casual "Shut up."

The author who created the "shut up" girl is young, too. He knows today. He writes of it uncritically, perhaps with a certain youthful enjoyment in its daring. He doesn't doubt that his heroine is alluring and charming and the sort of young thing whom men desire. He accepts her—"shut up," stockingless feet, selfishness and all such charming qualities. And the reason he accepts her is because he's part of today and today has lost its way and is groping blindly without realizing that it is blind.

The older generation, however, remembering a less jazz-full, clothesless day stands off sorrowfully and mourns for the decadence of modern life.

Illusions Gone

Let me remind you of an address delivered recently by the head of a great university, as a message to young men about to go out and face the world of today:

"The modern dress, the modern dance, the modern music and modern manners of today are symptoms that indicate that somehow in this age we have lost our bearings and that the old values of life, once so highly prized, have been forgotten. There is a danger of a lessening if not a loss of the old-time reverence for womanhood.

"Every age of moral and spiritual progress in the history of any people has always been an age of chivalry, in which womanhood has not only been respected but revered. Today our illusions seem to be gone; everything is obvious; no word is left unsaid and no veil drawn."

And now, by way of collecting evidence, here is an expression of opinion from some of the women of the Chicago Woman's Club, one of the most notable organizations of its kind in the world. One of its members gave out an interview in which she said:

"Who is to blame for the false standards of dress which we now have? Not the girls, but the women of leisure among whom we find ourselves.

"There was a time when rouge and extreme clothes set certain girls apart. But it is so no longer. Now the same styles prevail for all the daughters of Eve."

"But how can we blame the girls?" asked another woman of prominence, "when a woman of sixty appears in an evening gown with no more than two inches of back?"

There isn't anything radically wrong with my sex. I protest against any one's reading that into the statements of these prominent people. But my sex thinks there's something radically wrong with men!

A Sane View

Wait a minute and I'll explain that statement of mine . . .

Women want love and marriage. Normal, healthy desire this—precisely the way women should feel.

But they act as if they'd come to the conclusion that there's only one way of appealing to men. They seem to fear that men take no interest in soul or mind, and that they must be appealed to by a disclosure of bodily charms and an assurance of emotional responses.

If this were true, man's love wouldn't be worth having.

Men can be made to want the best. Women have only to believe that. Then we'll swing away from the standards which are hurting us even while they disgust some of us.

Girls! Women! Let's believe in ourselves. Let's believe in men. Let's believe that we have something fine and of lasting value to give—and offering soul and spirit—let's help our sad world of today to an escape from the ugly thraldom of so-called styles.
